one month that will be tun to participate in and should prove to have something of interest for everyone.

To get the month off to a flying start, we have the Summerfest and Invitational Lobb Ball Tournament to be held on July 4th through July 6th. There will be several feature attractions on this weekend with the Lobb Ball Tournament ranking right up there with Gordie Tapp, the featurentertainer for the Summerfest, with Country (the Singing Post Family) backing him up and supplying their own brand of music. The ball tournament itself should be music. The ball tournament itself should be a major attraction becasse, rather than stress competitiveness, this tournament will atress fun and sportsmanship with both men and women making up teams. The team at bat supplies their own pitcher and, while the winning and runner-up teams in each division will receive cash prizes, there will also be fun presentations made during the tournament. Many local players will be participating on several of the teams to give a local flavour to the fun and competition. and competition.

As the Summerfest ends, Madoc's first Heritage Week begins, running from July 6th through July 12th. Heritage Week is just that, a week when we get a chance to look at our heritage and to go from the hustle and bustle of the 1980's back in time when everything was less hectic and much less costly. Madoc's own museum, which officially opened this week and will remain open throughout the summer, will be open for the history buffs during Heritage Week. On July 11th and 12th, Madoc's Annual Antique Show and Sale will take

Madoc's Sidewalk Sale a trip back in time

While this year's Heritage Week Sidewalk Sale will feature the wares of the merchants of Madoc on the sidewalks of merchants of Madoc on the sidewalks of the village like past years, the organizers of this year's event are hoping to add that old time flavour to make it a truly unique event for Madoc. To add that flavour, the organizers are asking the merchants and their staffs to dress in period costumes, antique cars will be on display in Madoc along with the Annual Anglican Church Antique Show and Sale; Heritage House will open for people to visit the past and the Sidewalk Sale will feature such things as free balloons for the children and 5 cent lemonade. Then, to wind up the week, the Kiwanis Club is sponsoring its annual street dance.

It can only be a success if everyone gets involved and the organizers feel that more and more people are, showing that kind of spirit. "Those-students at Heritage House have been a real inspiration to us $\mathbb{m}\text{." said Ron Dittburnet; one of the organizers of the sale. "They have offered their services in any area we need them and some of those jobs have not been easy for them. They have never hesitated to make the attempt and I thing the people of Madoc can be very proud of their young people. For people so young, they can teach us a lot about the spirit we need to make something like this a success." Nowadays, people are forced to concentrate on their own businesses to make them successful and sometimes the unity that used to be in a community is forgotten. These students want to see that unity and community involvement brought back into community involvement brought back into this community, even if it is only for one week, and they're prepared to set the example. "We will also be going on the bus tours that operate out of Madoc and doing some historical commenting on the different destinations of the tours," said

Tracey. "We want the people to be aware of their heritage in a small community and become involved in that heritage."

One of the events that these students are promoting for Heritage Week is a good old fashioned tug of war. To go wift he old fashioned dress, lemonade, suckers and balloons that will be a part of the Sidewalk sale. They are hoping to have three categories in the tug of war, women, children and men. I guess what we're really trying to do is see has the most "pull" in Madoc and we've thrown it open to anyone."

Madoc warms up for Summerfest

This year's Madoc Summerlest, Ball Tournament and Barbecue, sponsored by the Madoc and District Chamber of Commerce in conjunction with the Ontario Canadians Hockey team, will feature Gordie Tapp, Nu-Country or the Singing Post Family and a lobb ball tournament that will combine to give good entertainment with fun, laughter and enjoyment at a premium for this event. The lobb ball tournament is something different for this area but will be no less entertaining than the normal ball tournaments. The fans who attend this tournament will have to get used to teams that look a little different from the normal because both women and men can play on the same team. Instead of nine players taking the field, ten play at one time in lobb ball and the team at bat is pitched to by their own pitcher. Naturally, he (or she) gives the batter three good pitches, (one of which you must hit in fait territory or you are out), which makes for a very offense oriented game. Add to that a rule which states there is no bunting or stealing of bases and that everyone on the team is included in the batting order and you should have a brand of baseball that will keep the fans entertained throughout the weekend. It is expected that more than twenty teams will be participating in the journament and at least one of these teams will be made up entirely of women.

Lobb ball is a sport designed to stress fun and sportsmanship and Dařyl Kramp, one of the local organizers, states, "That's just what we want for this Summerfest. We want people to be able to come to the ball park and see a different brand of ball that will allow them to choose the team they want to support and really become involved in cheering and supporting that team. It's a type of ball that can appeal to all age groups and, by allowing women and men to play on the same team, we hope the women will enjoy the game too. We want the emphasis off competitiveness and on fun and enjoyment."

And Kramp didn't stop at the ball tournament when he was stressing fun and enjoyment for the whole family. 'We want the whole family to be able to come to our the whole family to be able to come to our summerfest and really enjoy, themselves. We'll have the Summerfest tent set up plus the playground open for the kids and it will be supervised. It won't be a babysitting service, but parents will be able to take their children to the playground while they're at the tournament and during daylight hours. We don't want any rowdysim and we won't put up with it. The Ontario Canadians will act as security for the event and, if anyone steps out of line or causes trouble, we'll just ask them to leave and make it known that they're not welcome back.'

The big day for the Summerfest part of the weekend will be Saturday. Nu-Country and Norm Post will supply much of the entertainment in the afternoon although a D.J. will fill in the breaks and other contests such as hog calling. An amateur contest and yodelling will also take place. In the evening, Gordie Tapp, that well known T.V. personality, will appear on stage to add that little something extra to this year's Summerfest. All of us have seen Gordie at one time or another on T.V., but his is our chance to see him live and in the flesh and, from all reports, Gordie isn't getting older, he's getting better. Admission into the Summerfest area for the show will be $6.00 at the gate and $5.00 per head if you buy advance tickets. Again, this show is aimed at attracting the whole family.

Throughout the day on Saturday, there will be a beef barbecue, available with a wider range of food also available at the ball park booth. Vehicles will not be allowed to park on the grounds but Sam Danford has generously donated his field south of the park for that purpose. The various events will take place, rain or shine, and, even though you may not enter any of the contests, you can still come away a winner. Making hamburg

BY IEANNETTE MOORE

In Havelock, 1940, women were striving even as today to make a pound of meat stretch to feed many or to last for several meals, for although prices were much lower too and commodities were scarce because of the war. The ladies of the WMS, Havelock United Church combined cooking know-how in issuing a cookbook containing their favourite recipes. In a foreword they know-how in issuing a cookbook containing their favourite recipes. In a foreword they moted "these fecipes have been carefully tested by the ladies whose names are tarkede, and we feel confident will, in every case prove highly satisfactory. We hope that the book will find a welcome to every home in Havelock and County, not only because of its intrinsic value, but because it will prove a valuable source of the never-to-be-forgotten war of the Allies and Germany of 1940. Let the peace of God rule in your hearts. Mrs. H. Wing, Fin. Secretary, Mrs. S.J. W. Clark, Treasurer."

Some of these recipes may be found helpful today, especially those stretching hamburger into a family dinner, such as:

Hamburger and Tomato Casserole

1b. round steak ground, 1 large onion finely chopped, 2 green peppers chopped, 1 small can of ready-to-serve cream of tomato soup, 1 tsp. salt, Vatsp, pepper, I medium size can of macaroni and cheese.

Combine ingredients as given mixing thorousble Plage in huttered casserole and Combine ingredients as given mixing thoroughly. Place in buttered casserole and bake in moderate oven about 45 minutes. Will serve 8. Use half the recipe to serve 4 -Mrs W. Rice.

Or you might try this one made with macaroni and tomatoes;

Drain and mix with one can of tomatoes. 11b. hamburg, a bit of onion, pepper and

Here's another, using tomato soup, the filler being used in the centre rather than

Combine all ingredients and mix well.

Press one-half the meat mixture into

2 lbs. ground steak. 2 eggs beaten, 3 slices of bread soaked in milk, onion, pepper and salt, large piece of butter. Mix well like pie crust with hands, make in a roll and sprinkle with flour. Add a little water in roasting pan. Bake slowly 1½ clours - Mrs. Robert Anglerson. If you prefer your round steak in a piece you might try this recipe by Mrs. Rae Williams for:

Slice carrots and potatoes and place in layers of each on top of steak and a can of peas last. Put salt and peppers on each layer. Add 1-cup of water and bake 1-2 hours. Keep covered in slow oven.

Check your eyes before travelling this summer

Highway travel during the coming months may afford a relatively safe and appealing method of vacationing. But with modern car comfort, 55 miles per hour still modern car comfort, 55 miles per hour still doesn't feel like you body is travelling down the road at nearly a mile a minute. The Ontario Association of Optometrists-urges motorists to think of safety first this summer and to consider more than just a

High-speed driving (at 55 m.p.h., or nearly 81 feet per second is high-speed driving) affects at least three visual abilities acuity, field of vision and distance

The standard letter height on a traffic sign is five inches. A driver with less than normal vision (say 20-50 or 6-15 under the metric system) must be 117 feet from a standard sign before he can read it. If that sign is telling him there is danger ahead, even under the best possible road conditions, that driver, at 60 m.p.h. will be conguisons, that griver, at 60 m.p.h. will be 164 feet past the sign before he could stop. With normal vision, or inadequate vision corrected so normal, the sign could have been read at a distance of 280 feet. At 55 m.p.h. even with slightly delayed reflexes the driver could have stopped before driver could have stopped before reaching the sign.

If the letters on the sign are translated into a bouncing ball five inches in diameter, your ability to stop within that margin may mean the difference between life and death for a child chasing it onto the

The faster you drive, the more you have to concentrate on the road directly that a horizontal field of vision of 180 degrees is reduced by 2-3 to 60 degrees at 50 miles per hour! This makes it particularly more difficult to see objects approaching from the sides or rear, for example, another car moving up when you decide to pass or change lanes.

Prolonged distance driving can seriously affect vision and safety. Fatigue can magnify the glare of an oncoming set of headlights and lengthen the eye's recovery time. Slowed visual responses may mean no chance at all for a pedestrian or the driver himself in an unexpected situation. "Regular stops to maintain alertness are not merely a convenience -- they are a necessity." says Dr. J. Peroff, President of the Ontario Association of Optometrists.

Some drivers approach night driving with alittle or no added caution. Even though vehicle and pedestrian traffic is lightest at night, it accounts for nearly 60 percent of all fatal traffic accidents. If glasses are prescribed for distance seeing, they should especially be worn during night driving. Sunglasses should come off even before twilight and your headlights should come on. Even though the road may not light up any more in the early evening, it makes you instantly visible among the shadows to another oncoming driver.

The Chairman of the Vision and Driving

Committee, Dr. H. Thompson, warns that "Common sense should prevail in the use of tabacco, alcohol and other drugs", he says. Certain drugs, for example, can seriously impair vision. Barbituates, tranquilizers, narcotics, even cold tablets can affect colour perception, can dull contrasts and fog visual acuity. Alcohol in particular can have the same effect as dropping a grey visor in front of your eyes. You need more illumination to distinguish objects and, if dazzled by a sharp light, you need a much longer time to recover your vision, reports the Ontario Association of Optometrics.

Optometrics.

President Peroff also adds a word of caution, that vision is as much a part of safe driving as the steering wheel or brake. A wise traveller will check his car over thoroughly before departing on a long trip. It only follows that the driver's eyes should be included in the pre-trip checklist:

GLASSES: If they've been prescribed,

SUNGLASSES: Don't take chances with inferior sunglasses and don't wear them at night or even dusk.

3. FATIQUE: Avoid driving if your eyes are tired and ache or burn

SPEED: Slow down drastically at night.

5. VISION: Be sure your eyes are fully equipped for driving, a wide field, sharp acuity, good depth perception, good muscle coordination, good night vision.

muscle coordination, good night

6. LIMITS: Know your visual limitations and take steps to minimize them. Use extra rear-view mirrors if necessary, fender guides, foglights and keep your seat as close as possible to verticle.

ASSISTANCE: Help your eyes. Clean all windows, mirrors, wipers, defoggers, etc. before starting out.

etc. before starting out.

By taking the time to check you visual system as carefully as you do your mechanical one, you eliminate one more potential hazard and multiply the chances for a completely safe and thoroughly enjoyable summer vacation says Ontario Association of Optometrists.

PULLERS JAMBOREE

COMING ON STRONG FOR THE SECOND YEAR

BY ROSS LEES

This year's Second Annual MHM Country Music and Puller's Jamboree to be held in Madoc on July 26th and 27, will be changed considerably from last year, but the organizers, the Fair board and the Madoc and area firemen, hope these changes will improve the program from

Due to the poor attendance last year of both entrants and on lookers, the horse, ony and dog pulls that made up a large part of last year's show, will not be taking place this year. The absence of these events disappointed the organizers, but they have included other events to try and improve the show and make if more interesting for everyone.

improve the show and make it more interesting for everyone. However, the two major attractions of last year will be included in this year's program. The tractor pulls, which surprised the organizers last year with the number of entrants, and the enthusiasm they showed, will be featured on Saturday, July 26th. Registration will take place from 10:00 a.m. until noon and tractors from far and wide are welcomed to come and try and wrest the trophies from the arms of the local farmers. Last year, head to head confrontations on the part of locals and out of the area contestants and even locals against locals, drew cheers from the crowd and more than a little fiercompetition from the entrants. The competition from the entrants from the crowd and suspiper last year but, after seeing rough competition from—outside—and within the area, they are confident that this year. Even as tractors pulled off the dirt track last year, yells of "Wait until nest year" were heard from the contestants. Bitter rivalries were established and tevenge will be sought on the track again this year. For further information on the tractor pulls, contact Laurie at 473-2674.

The tractor pulls won't be the only events on Saturday's card, however. The tractor pull will begin at approximately 1:00 p.m. and an open horseshoe tournament is scheduled for 2:00 p.m. Any and all entrants are welcome with trophies to be presented to the best 'pitchest'. For more information, call 473-4721 or

A talent show will take place from 8:00 to 9:00 p.m. sponsored by the firemen and a dance with country music by Southern Comfort will be held from 9:00 p.m. until 1:00 a.m. Admission to the show and dance is $3.00 for singles and $5.00 for couples. The firemen will also have their food booth in operation from noon until midnight.

On Sunday, the firemen will again be on hand to serve breakfast at the fairgrounds.

They will serve from 8:00.a.m. to 12:00 noon and will certainly present you with their usual hearty meal.

Then, registration for the 4 by 4 truck

pull takes place from 10:00 a.m. until noon, with the actual event scheduled to start at 1:00 p.m. Pipes and drums will kick off this part of the event that again saw an unusually large turnout of both contestants and spectators last year. Clubs from Peterborough, Oshawa, Trenton and Ottawa attended last year to see what kind of competition they would have from the locals in Madoc and the area. Needless to say, they got all the competition they wanted from our inexperienced drivers and they all yowed to bring more members of their clubs, to compete this year. However, having more members from the clubs in attendance may not help them this year. Our own local drivers gained a great deal of experience last year and they will be out to strut their stuff this year. Wrany of the competitions last year were very close even though the local boys didn't know some of the tricks that would give them those few extra feet that made the difference between first place and tenth place. Now, with that little extra knowledge tucked away from last year, we expect the locals to go after the drivers who compete in virtually every meet of this kind held in Ontario, and it should be fun to watch.

These clubs were impressed with the way the first event of its kind in Madoc and the area was held. Ted Seasmith, one of the organizers since its inception last year, acknowledged that mistakes were made last year. "We just didn't know what to expect or what we were up against last year. Now, with one meet under our belts, we know where we can immove the show this year and we will make the first to do just that. We want to first the todo just that. We want to first the todo just that we want to first the year and we will make the first to make the first that the same of the best, both for competition and organization, or people just won't come to it. We feelconfident that we can organize better this year because we know what to expect. We also feel confident that the people who participated in our pull last year were suitably impressed with the competition and we think we will see more entrants going after that first place finish in each category. The people that enjoyed last year's pull should really be impressed with the year's weets."

Ken Yarrow, one of the organizers also involved since the inception of the event, made a discovery after the show last Year. "We felt we didn't have very much scheduled for the women last year." This year, to remedy that problem, they have inserted a fashion show into the program to be held in the arena at 200 p.m. "We want the women to be able to come to the jamboree and enjoy themselves while the men are watching the pulls." So this year. Stickwood's Drygoods Store will hold just such an event for the women. It will commence about 2:00 p.m. on Sunday and is expected to last until about 4:00 p.m. The show is being billed as a family show and will include fashions for everyone from the cradle right up to men and women.

At approximately 2:30 p.m., the firemen will also put on a demonstration of their rescue equipment which may be staged between some of the other events. Again, the firemen's booth will be open, but only until 5:00 p.m. on Sunday. While the show for this year has changed somewhat from last year, it appears that it could very definitely be equally as good as last year and, if the organizers predictions come true, it will likely be much better. For further information on the 4 by 4 truck pull, call Ted at 473-2426.

ONE FOOT IN THE FURROW

Canada is falling behind in agriculture

BY BOB TROTTER

Some nations in this troubled old oblate

spheroid treat farmers pretty good. Most Canadians are aware that about 30 years ago, the United States embarked on a plan which paid farmers not to produce on some land. The European Common Market is famous -- or infamous, depending on which side of the fence you are located -for supporting agricultural products to the point where it is possible to break into those markets through imports from other

France, for instance, has such a support price for all dairy products and most grains that other countries simply cannot sell in France. It's no use trying. At the same time, when France has a surplus of a certain products, farmers get their support price and the French taxpayer pays to sell the surplus products at prices far below what the french farmer was paid.

It's a system which keeps farmers producing and keeps them on the land, doing what they know best how to do.

I am not suggesting that Canadians should subsidize agriculture to this degree.

I am suggesting, though, that some countries appreciate farmers and willingly demonstrate that fact.

Now comes word that Australia, through now comes word that Australia, through a planned system of support, could soon rival Canada for the position of the second-most-important wheat exporter in the world. The U.S.A. is, of course, still tne wortd. The U.S.A. is, of course, still number one exporter of wheat. Canada has been number two for 50 years. Australia has adopted a five-year wheat-marketing act which offers farmers high guaranteed prices: $114.70 (Austral-lian) a tonne compared or 575 consecutions. lian) a tonne compared to $75 a tonne now.

The changes being adopted to wheat marketing arrangements will have pro-found effects on the industry and should lead to permanent expansion of the area lead to permanent expansion of the area devoted to wheat, says G.A. McGregor, Canada's first commercial secretary posted at Canberra Australia.

Under the plan the farmers Down Under may quickly reach a point where the

And if you think Canadian agriculture is strictly regulated, then take a look at Australia. A planned reduction has been under way for two years in the production of peaches, pears and apples because the industry was plagued with surpluses which have appeared as bargains in Canada and the U.S. Now, these bargains may not be available. Farmers have learned their lesson. They are rapidly reducing growing available. Farmers have learned their lesson. They are rapidly reducing growing these products through the Australian Canned Fruits Corp. which controls all sales of canned peaches, apricots and pears both in Australia and to export

Now, that's control, the same type of control enjoyed by milk, tobacco, chickens, eggs and turkeys in Canada.

Other countries certainly seem to spring to the aid of farmers. Why, then, in Canada is everyone screaming so loud about "monopoly" marketing boards? Why do "monopoly" marketing boards? Why do big-circulation magazines such as the Reader's Digest keep taking potshots at marketing boards which are operating legally? These boards are run by farmets, carefully scrutinized by government watchdogs. Some have even included consumer representatives on their boards of directors. of directors.

The really exciting parts of the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority Canoe Race on Sunday were the start and the portage across the Marmora Dam. Two or three canoes had trouble at the start, dunking canoes had trouble at the start, dunking themselves repeatedly [left]; below left shows Terry Shannon and Tom Doyle taking second place away from Kim Hughes and Tim Kerr as they managed to

THE MARATHON OF HOPE Terry Fox accomplishes a dream

A lot of us have big dreams - things we see ourselves accomplishing becoming rich, becoming famous, doing something really noticeable, doing something really worthwhile.

Most of us never try to put them into action. They're truly dreams and we never allow them to infrude into our "reality". But what makes dreams even possible is that somewhere, every now and then, there is someone with the courage to really dare to do something big, to carry out a grandiose plan, to risk failure.

When we see someone doing something like that, we feel lifted, almost as if we're part of it, almost as if we were daring to try and do the things that we've always wanted to do."

This summer, we're seeing such a

This summer, we're seeing such a unique effort. Terry Fox, a 21 year old student from Coquitlam, British Columbia, student from Coquitlam, British Columbia, is running across Canada to raise mone for cancer research. He's running in spite of the fact that he has only one leg - he lost the other to bone cancer three years ago. And he's having a tremendous impact on the whole nation. The Toronto Star has taken up his cause. The Four Seasons Hotel Chain is running a call-in line to handle piledges and has pledgeds 22 a mile - $10,000 if he completes his 5,200 mile journey. The Alberta Payachuting Association has matched that and other companies and groups are expected to step forward. One Toronto lawyer raised $2,000 from his clients and a Toronto Disc. Jockey raised twice that in 35 minutes from his listeners. Two men - Garth Walker of Mississauga and Jim Brown of Kingston cycled from Toronto to Ottawa on Dominion Day to help raise money over a route that Fox won't be covering. And people everywhere are pledging their money to Terry Fox and fighting cancer. Fox left St. John's Newfoundland on April 12 and has been averaging 30 miles a day. He's expected to be in Ottawa for Canada Day and to head out along Highway 7 to Toronto. On July 6 he is expected to pass through Madoc, Martmora, Havelock and Norwood and then return to Havelock for a special dinner and presentation ceremony. Marmora, organisers are hoping to get some young people to jog a few miles with him and in both Marmora (around noon) and Norwood (around 8 p.m.). people are asked to turn out and line the streets to encourage Terry on his way. And of equise Cancer Society organisers from both Sillages will be on the streets looking for pledges. As well pledges can be handed in all next week, including Sunday at the Marmora Insurance Office on front street. But it is in Havelock that things are really happening. Three local joggers Steve Jewett, Paul Blakely and Doug Hart will run with Terry from east of the village; on his way through, Terry will be dropping in at the Havelock Community Centre where he will meet people and say hello. People are urged to come to the centre or line the streets for his arrival - around 3 p.m. There will be entertainment singer-guitarist Alan Stillwell - and refreshments.

Members of the Haveloth Village Council, and bylaw enforcement officer Bud Farrell, representing the war amputes, plus area radio and t.v. are all expected to be on hand. The Cancer Society will present Terry with a plaque made by local craftsman Charles Carpenter, and lodges, social and charitable organizations are being asked to come out in their uniforms for the occasion.

The windows in front of my writing desk The windows in front of my writing desis look out through the leafy greenness of an elm tree onto a small meadow and wooded ravine beyond. That view serves oc-casionally as my inspiration, often as my distraction, for despite the nearby roar of Highway 401, but ravine wildlife shows a remarkable adaptability to their urban setting.

Our most exciting distraction this spring has been a family of red foxes, whose den is within a few hundred yards of our office. To those of us who normally think of open fields and brushy fencerows when we think of foxes, the realization that Toronto's ravines harbour a healthy population of foxes comes as quite a surprise. But our foxes seem to take all the noise and bustle of a modern city quite in stride. Our vixen or mother, regularly checks out the bird feeder to see if any of the squirrels are becoming careless, and she is even an attentive spectator, from her grassy hiding place, of the soccer games in a nearby park. But if her presence is detected, she and her two kits soon disappear.

Foxes might be called our prettiest predator, with their reddish fur glowing warmly, set off by black booties and warmly, set off by black booties and muzzle, and a contrasting white tip on the tail. Their prancing gait when surveying a field for mice is almost reminiscent of the cat family, even though they are actually related instead to our dogs. Foxes and mice go together, of course, since field mice provide the mainstay of the fox diet. Cottontail rabbits are another favourite prey, but the small size of an adult fox, averaging only 8 to 12 pounds.

adult fox, averaging only 8 to 12 pounds, precludes any food animals much larger. Besides their beneficial effects in controlling rodents, foxes are valued for their furs, to the tune of just over a million dollars in 1978.

If the Ministry of Natural Resources have their way, Ontario foxes will soon be subjected to another, pressure as well. Legislation to allow British-style fox hunts in Ontario has been introduced in the Ontario Legislature, but it may be some

And what's more, however I tell any of my friends about it they continue to stare at me in abject disbelief long after I've left the scene, and they tap their temples and shake their heads to signify that I must finally have flipped my helmet.

But it's true.
Jack Nicklaus actually spoke to me.
It was just a year ago at Oakville, at the Glen Abbey Golf Course, when they were playing the Canadian Open there, and it all watching the play in Montreal.

Jack Nicklaus actually spoke to me, can u imagine that? Now for the last few years I've been rying hard to improve my golf game, and I ave to be honest with you and confess hat I haven't made all that much progress.

The thing is, you see, I didn't start laying golf until about four years ago, and uring the last 24 months I've been

In fact I know one particular beleaguered gent who plays a second ball if the first one doesn't land where he expected it to, which is never, so he simply puts down another ball and takes a second waft at that, just as though he'd never hit the first one at all.

But he only counts one shot. Then at the end, when he finally gets to the green, if he misses the putt with the first ball he tries it over with a fresh one. But he doesn't count that one either.

But I'm not like that, you see, I count them all, so that's why I'm still trying to them all, so that's why I m still trying to break a hundred, while everybody else is winding up somewhere in the seventies. I mean to say, when you can play like that you could eventually go around that course in about fifty, and make Lee Trevino look like an amateur.

As I mentioned earlier I haven't been playing all that long, and I could not truthfully claim that I have made any massive strides, other than from one end of the fairway to the other, and I persistently lose balls by the baker's dozen in every inch of water that happens to be lying about, and in any line of trees or foliage expansive enough to engulf my shots.

I should perhaps mention here that one time during the winter months, when I was playing on the golf course at Clearwater in Florida, I did manage to fulfill a nifty 91, which unfortunately nobody would believe when it came time to nav in. and I must when it came time to pay up, and I must admit I was just a little doubtful myself.

However, to get along with my story.

Last summer I went to Oakville to see the Canadian Open at Glen Abbey, and a magnificent affair it turned out to be. The weather was more than perfect and the golf was unbelievable.

For instance I saw Lee Trevino, For instance I saw Lee Irevino, on the hitteenth hole, hit the ball out of the sand trap about twenty yards from the flag, and land the ball squarely in the hole without it even touching the ground at all. But altogether it really is incredible the way those fellows can swipe a ball from the middle of the fairway and lift it 200 or more yards right onto the green so that it comes to rest within, a few feet of the pin. When they drive off from the tee the ball

Spinach salad

Ontario spinach is now on the market and it makes a great beginning to a fresh, crispy salad.

Spinach is actually the first leafy green to appear on the market, since Ontario leeberg and some other greens, such as Romaine, don't arrive until July. Marketing specialists at the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food say that spinach is at its peak supply during June, September and October, although it is available through July and August too.

Most Ontario spinach is sold in the 10-ounce cello-pack bags. At harvesttime, spinach is mechanically harvested, washed, hand-graded, then put into bushels and shipped to the packers to be bagged. A small amount of spinach is sold in loose bunches

If you buy Ontario spinach in the cello-pack, just store it in the refrigerator $186 Return - No · Meals or Bar cello-pack, just store it in the tetrigerator as is. Terry Fox visits Madoc during "Marathon of Hope"

And we thought we had it tough! In the past few months, we watch the television and see world affairs deteriorating to the point that we could have a third world war at any minute. We see monetary value fluctuating daily and continue to hear reports and predictions of another depression. We see countries daily losing the fight for survival and we continue of hear of groups and countries exploiting their fellow man to the point that many of our former values are being called into question. And then we see the many natural disasters occurring all over the of 1,500 people to spread his message and to try and raise a few extra dollars to help

world and we realize just how lucky we've

Then, while watching that same television, we see another story on the screen. It's about a twenty year old man running across his country on one leg because he has lost the other leg above the knee due to bone cancer. It's the type of story that hits everyone and effects them eply. Suddenly, our problems don't seem nearly as bad.

A few days later, that same young man passes through our lives for a very short period of time but, for those he comes in passes through our lives for a very snort period of time but, for those he comes in contact with, he leaves a lasting impression and you know your life will be better because of that momentary contact. If he can go through the depression of losing a leg, fight back during a year and a half of chemotherapy and then run 5,200 miles on an artificial leg, to raise money for cancer research and act as an example for other cancer victims, what could those of us who still have all our limbs and our health do it we set goals for ourselves like Terry Fox? How much better would this world be if we all had such unselfish goals?

Terry Fox came into Madoc on Saturday night and he left again between 5:00 and 6:00 a.m. on Sunday morning, but he won't soon be forgotten by those who had the good fortune to see and talk to this incredible young man. On very shorn notice. Terry consented to visit Madoc and made two appearances throughout the day, he still had time to drop into a community

M of E awaits report on Deloro arsenic clean-up

Some progress has been made since last winter, bur Ministry of Environment officials are still waiting for the final consultant's report before the beginnings of any major clean-up of the Deloro Smelting and Refining site are undertaken. Ministry of Environment officer Jack Pruner said last Friday that the "long, involved report" would be a detailed study, including cost, of a five year clean-up plan of the site and said that, if things go as they hope, it would be released sometime before the end of July. Depending on rainfall, early parts of the plan might be implemented this summer. "We hope to do some of the preliminary work of site investigation in August, in order that things can be made ready for next year." Mr. Pruner said. "There are next year," Mr. Pruner said. Mr. Pruner said that he believed that the

But he had to be in bed at 7:30 p.m. to get enough sleep and restro start his run at 5:00 a.m. the next morning. Minutemen win two out of three, have 7 and 4 record

The Madoc Minutemen won two out of their last three ball games. In Madoc they shutout, Hoards 2-0; lost to the Stirling Selects 4t2 and in Stirling, they turned the tables on the Selects with a 6-3 win.

During the Hoard's game, Steven Johnston pitched a one hit shutout (bunt single). Steve walked one man and struck out nine in gaining his third victory against one defeat. Charlie Wannamaker singled in the third inning, stole second base and was driven in by Dave Fleming's single to give Johnston the only run he needed. Clayton Whiteman drove in Harley Willemsen with an insurance run jot the Willemsen with an insurance run aw the sixth inning.

At the ball park on Tuesday night (July 1st) the Minutemen failed to give Brian Armstrong support in the fielding and hitting department. The Selects pitcher, Larry Barnard, held the Minutemen to three hits and two runs. Armstrong, meanwhile, gave up four runs on six hits, walked none and struck out eight batters. It was a fine pitching performance in a losing cause.

In Stirling on Thursday night, with Armstrong again on the mound, the local squad supplied some solid hitting and good fielding and walked away with a 6-3 win. Eric Bailey's three run homer in the fourth inning broke, up a close pitcher's battle between Armstrong and Morton.

Leading the offense for the Minutemen. was Robert Nickle with a single, triple and two runs schred: Clayt Whiteman with a single and two runs schred: Clayt Whiteman with a single and two RBI's (plus a fine defensive play to get the last out of the game); Brian Armstrong/with two singles and two runs scored; Harold Bailey with a good sacrifice and aviun scored; Terry Helps with a RBI and, as previously mentioned, Eric and, as previously mentioned, Eric Bailey's three run homer.

Armstrong, still nursing arm problems, pitched well. He scattered six hits, walked none and struck out three.

The Minutemen's record now 7 wins and 4 losses. The Minutemen play at home Tuesday (July 8) to the Stirling Patz. They travel to Tweed on Thursday to meet the weed squad and travel to Stirling on Tuesday July 15th, to play the Juveniles at 7 p.m. We still have two postponed games that have to be rescheduled; home to Tweed and away to Halloway.

Summerfest supplies enjoyment, but barely breaks even.

Madoc's Annual Summerfest and Ball Madoc's Annual Summerrest and Dail Tournament was not as successful as the organizers, the Ontario Canadians Hockey Team, had hoped it would be but, for those who attended the ball games and the evening program, success could only be measured in the fun they had and, to them, the Summerfest was a success:

the Summerfest was a success:

The weekend festivities began on Friday night as the Lobb Ball Tournament got under way. Stressing sportsmanship instead of competitiveness, the two games played on Friday night saw the ball players having a good time even though very few fans turned out to watch this unusual sport. On Saturday, the ball teams again took to the field. As the day progressed, the fans did not increase appreciably in

As the games progressed on Saturday, a small afternoon crowd began to filter in to listen to the Singing Post Family, various and sundry other competitions and the music of the D.J. as he filled in between acts. The Singing Post Family welcomed this crowd with their brand of toe tapping, knee slapping music that surprised most people. The fiddler knew his trade and he people. The Indier knew his trade and he soon had the people in the mood for more. And more they got. Gordle Tapp arrived on the stage as storm clouds raced overhead and gusts of wind threatened to blow the tent away. However, his ability to assess the type of crowd he was assess the type of crown he was entertaining was soon evident and he was getting round after round of applause while his jokes, stories and actions kept the crowd laughing and enjoying the evening His type of entertainment is geared to small, farming communities such as ours and he also included many stories about his entertainer and especially on Hee Haw.

Shortly thereafter, Gordie Tapp dis-appeared and Cousin Clem made his Cousin Clem was everything the crowd was looking for, with lots of stories and jokes to keep them laughing inbetween some very good country songs. Even those still around the country songs. Even those still around the ball park were kept entertained as Clem took shots at himself, fellow entertainers and just about anything else that popped into his mind. The only problem with having an entertainer of Gordie Tapp's calibre is that the time seems to go so quickly that it appears as if he has just come on the stage when it is time for him to leave.

On Sunday, the warm, sunny t and the much more competitive ball being played on that day attracted a somewhat larger crowd. While the emphasis had been off competitive ball for the first two days of the tournament, Sunday's games emphasized that very phase of the game. All of Sunday's competitors were out to win the prize money and trophies and they took the prize money and trophies and they took their games seriously, although there was still some good natured bantering back and forth. Finally, the final game arrived and one of our local teams was involved. A team from Ivanhoe was competing against Centreville for ton spot in the transcapent. Centreville for top spot in the tournament and they eventually won the championship over the very competant Centreville team, who were the A division runnerup winners. In the B division, Proctor and Gamble me head to head with Black Diamond and eventually emerged victorious.

The ticket was sold by Alvie Devolin and was also drawn by Alvie, who contributed immensely to the success of the draw by selling in the neighbourhood of $1,700 worth of tickets.

The organizers of the event would like to thank all shose people who contributed time and effort to the Summerfest. They felt it would have been impossible to hold the event without the help of these

Many fight for nomination, PC president says

BY PATRICK REDICAN

We're very likely going to see a much-contested nomination when the Provincial Tories get around to replacing retiring M.P.P. Clark Rollins. The 69 year old Mr. Rollins surprised everyone by announcing his retirement after 21 years as Provincial riding president Terry Pigder in Madoc says that we can expect "about seven candidates on the platform at the nomination when it actually comes. I would guess that at least 10 to 15 would go through the motions before that."

Mr. Pigden reported that, because of the number of candidates rumoured to be in the running, a candidate search committee has been ruled redundant. "The executive met last week to discuss the possibility but we decided that with so many names being mentioned, it wouldn't be necessary

Heading up the list for possible contenders are Prince Edward-Hastings riding president Ross Parks, Hastings County Clerk-Treasurer Carl Bateman and Mr. Pigden himself.

Also being mentioned, according to Mr. Pigden and other sources are Hastings Warden John Clemens, Peterborough businessman Keith Brown, Madoc school trustee and businessman Tom Burnside, Bancroft high school principal Ron Leach, Russ Holly also of Bancroft, Marmora and Lake Township Reeve Graham Bell and Madoc businessman Kal Kincaid.

Parks declared himself for the candidacy almost two years ago after Mr.
Rollins supported M.P.P. Jim Taylor against Prince Edward - Hastings M.P. Jack Ellis in the federal nomination fight Mr. Parks is a strong supporter of Ellis. He lives in Thurlow Township where he owns Plains Concrete.

Mr. Pigden said there appears to be a move afoot to draft Mr. Bateman for the candidacy. "Apparently there is a move afoot to try and convince him. He would make an excellent candidate and I would imagine that if he decided to run he'd stand an excellent chance."

As, to his own chances, Mr. Pigden couldn't say. "I'm not ruling it our, but I wouldn't say. 'I m not running i'don't think I will be running.'

When asked whether the party will divide into two camps on a sort of Rollins-Ellis split over the nomination from Mr. Pigden said he thought it was unlikely "I think you'll see four or five strong groups formed. There will be a number with strong followings. It just depends on whose running." He said that Mr. Rollins had not indicated to him that he would personally be supporting a particular candidate

Mr, Pigden said that the convention to choose a candidate would probably be held in the winter months, between November and January. We don't think there will be an election until the spring and we don't want to choose too early."
"We feel that, except for not having a candidate, that we're fairly well organized.

Our election committees are ready to go. even if we had an election called tor 30

Mr. Pigden said that we could expect candidates to start declaring themselves over the summer months and begin canvassing the local P.C. organizations for

Weeklies face hardships because of strike

Smaller papers, reduced revenues and the prospect of a total stop in publication face Ontario's weekly newspapers as a result of a major strike against Abitibi-Price, the province's largest producer of

Bob Hanna, Vice President of Quinte Web Press in Tweed, which prints 14 of the weekly newspapers in east-central Ontario said a company-wide strike at Abitibi-Price is "quite critical" but "We don'me expect to have to close down don's expect to have to close down completely. We expect to get help from other newsprint suppliers and we expect to get some help from the OWNA".

However, it seems unlikely that other suppliers will be able to pick up the slack to make sufficient difference. According to the Globe and Mail's Report on Business last Saturday, Spruce Falls Power and Paper Co. Ltd. of Kapuskasing, one of the Paper Co. Ltd. of Rapusassing, major suppliers to the weekly press and the supplier of Quinte Web, supplies to weeklies will be cut by about 40 per cent if weeklies will be cut by about when terms the strike goes on.

According to Mr. Hannah, this means that, if the strike goes beyond the end of September, the weeklies might be left without newsprint altogether. As it is he said, Quinte Web is refusing to do anywsprint work except for the weeklies and is asking the weeklies to cut back on the size of their paners.

is asking the weekings to the back of its size of their papers.

This will probably mean a reduced editorial content to many of the area weekiles. The Tweed News for instance, which Mr. Hannah co-owns, will not be running an editorial page for the duration of the strike, while other area newspapers have agreed to tighten up as well. Loss of revenue might occur if the smaller size

Cembal Publications, which publishes six local newspapers including the Madoc Review, the Marmora Herald, Havelock Citizen, the Norwood Register, the Hastings Star and the Amberstview will not be carried with the company of the state of the Martings of the Mart Heritage, will not be ceasing publication under any conditions according to publisher Joseph Cembal, although he has agreed to run smaller papers. "If it's necessary we will run on more expensive stock or pay more for newsprint" Mr. Cembal said, "I don't intend to stop publishing."

There has been extensive stockpiling going on since it became evident some six months ago that a strike was likely to occur according to the Globe and Mail. American publishers, faced with declining advertising in the past few months, have continued to take delivery of all newsprint they ordered and have big inventories. By contrast, Canadian papers, both weeklies and dailies, have not been suffering any advertising declines and have not had the opportunity to stockpile paper. Mr. Hannah also said that large stockpiles of newsprint have been created, the result, according to Mr. Cembal, will probably be a black market in newsprint at costs four or five times the present costs. Observers of the Abitibi Strike say that the strike could well last several n and Mr. Hannah expressed the belief that, even if the strike were settled it might not mean the end of troubles in the industry. "A lot of the other places are watching Abitibi to see what kind of a settlement they get. If they go back in, others might

Terry Fox-an example for us all

Terry's light against cancer began at the age of eighteen when he was playing basketball in university. As he was playing, he gradually began to notice some pain in his right knee. Like many athletes of this day and age, he attributed this pain to torn ligaments or something of that nature. As time progressed, the pain became worse and, waking up one day, he could not get out of bed because the pain was so bad. After x-rays and tests, Terry was shocked to learn that he would lose his leg above the knee in four days.

Looking back on those four days, Terry leg above the knee in four days.

Looking back on those four days, Terry recalled the deep depression he experienced, but also remembered how friends and relatives gathered around him to lend and relatives gainered around pim to lend support and encouragement. The night before his operation was to take place, a friend of Terry's showed him an article about a runner that also had only one leg and this article was to become his inspiration for the next year and a half as he underwent chemotherapy to stop the further spread of cancer in his body. Even further spread of cancer in his body. Even as he suffered through a cure that many cancer victims feel is at least as bad as the disease itself, Terry realized how lucky he was because he responded to the treatment and was eventually cured of cancer although he lost his leg at mid-thigh during the process.

Terry looks on himself as a guy who just quit and he has proved it from the he lost his leg. "I wanted to show people from the very beginning that I didn't need to be pitied and I also realized how lucky I was that the therapy worked for I met and saw many other people that the therapy could not save and, after reading that article on the other one legged runner. I made up my mind to be an example to other cancer victims and that I example to other cancer victims and that is wouldn't just roll over and quit. I wanted to do something to further cancer research and help other victims. The one thing I stress to everyone I speak to along the way is that cancer can strike anyone."

And Terry is serving as an example to us all. He has now covered approximately 2,031 pain filled miles and has had a profound effect on anyone he has talked to or who has seen him running. It is a heart-wrenching experience to see him awkwardly running along the highway but also gratifying to see the encouragement SHERIFF'S SALE OF LAND the passing motorists give him as they honk their horns of wave their encourage-ment as they pass him. "The marathon of hope is not an ego trip for me or a way to make Terry Fox famous," he says. "My sole purpose for making the company of the company." sole purpose for making this run is to raise money for cancer research and, even if I complete the cross country run of over 5.000 miles, I won't consider it a success unless I raise a great deal of money toward the end.

But, while Terry cites the raising research money as the main reason for the marathon of hope, he also admits that there are secondary reasons for him to complete the run. He wants to prove to himself that he can overcome his handicap, himself that he can overcome his handicap, but also to serve as an example to other victims. And last but not least, Terry also wants to show that, while research has come up with a great artificial leg for perfect a running leg.

It is hard enough for most of us to imagine the magnitude of Terry's project for a completely healthy person but, when we stop and think that he is doing it with an

for a completely healthy person but, when we stop and think that he is doing it with an artificial leg, it doubles our respect for this gutsy young man who does not know the meaning of the word quit. But, if you delve into his running a little bit, you'll soon learn that Terry has more problems that make each and every mile he runs a fight against pain, apart from the physical pain of running about 26 miles per day.

As Terry and his entourage set out on the trip. Everyone expected that Terry would lose weight as he progressed along the route. In Quebec, they discovered that this was not the case. For some reason, the artificial leg began to cause him a great deal of pain during the running through Quebec, so Terry had to visit a doctor to diagnose the problem. After tests were done, it was discovered that Terry's thigh muscles in his right leg had expanded a full two inches from when he had begun his run in Newfoundland which meant that his artificial leg no longer fitted properly and was now causing a great deal of irritation and pain while he ran. So, while Terve was now causing a great deal of irritation and pain while he ran. So, while Terry continues his rigorous routine, two more legs are being made in Quebec and will eventually be sent to him along his route, hopefully by the time he reaches Toronto. With all of this, Terry still has no intentions quitting. Terry has already worn out three shoes Terry has already worn out three snotes on-his left leg and four shoes on his right leg, and he still has about 3,269 miles to go. Even as he runs through the sweltering heat of Ontario in July, he is already worrying about temperatures he will recognize in the west as winter sets in. He encounter in the west as winter sets in. He looks on the Rocky Mountains as his main barrier and hopes to get through them before winter sets in, even though he has before winter sets in, even though he has committed himself to running through that area in late fall and early winter. "I look at it like this. Those roads are made with cars in mind and, even if we do get snow, the roads will be cleared for cars. If a car can get through, it shouldn't be that hard for me to get through, "which again points out the indomitable spirit of Terry Fox.

Dutch-Canadian woman shares immigration experience

Everyone has their unique experience, their own life story; while much of it is individual, valuable only to ourselves. There is always something we feel that others could benefit from if only we could communicate it.

MRS. HILDA DE WILDT

Hilda de Wildr is a recent comer to Marmora; she and her husband live on the Marmora; sne and ner nusoand live of the Deloro Road where it intersects the old Madoc Road. Feeling that she had knowledge that many of us don't she contacted the Herald and asked us if we would put her story in the paper.

Mrs. de Wildt immigrated with her husband and their four children from an overcrowded Holland 23 years ago. It was she says, not an easy move - because of a mix-up, no one met them when they got off the train in Union Station in Toronto; eventually with the help of generous people they made their way to an eventually with the help of generous people they made their way to an immigrant clearing centre in Hamilton. First attempts for her husband to find a joi in his trade - bookbinding were unsuccessful but he eventually found a job that he enjoyed just as much, working as a nurseryman in Winona, near Stoney Creek, and then in Bowmanville.

Likewise Mrs. de Wildt found work where she could get it - as a waitress in a where she could get it as a waiters in a restaurant and then doing domestic work. Finally her husband got work at General Motors in Oshawa and eventually, by living carefully, they were able to buy the home they now own when he was forced to retire they now own when he was forced to retire early because of arthritis.

To Mrs. de Wildt, her experience has lead her to know a few things that perhaps many native Canadians are not aware of - the hardships of immigrating, of being new in an unknown place - and the fact that it is not impossible to succeed. She also feels that immigrants should he given more halp in immigrants should be given more help in this country and more encouragement. "I don't think that we should have more

"I don't think that we should have more people than we have jobs for them, but when we do bring people in we should give them more help." She herself, although she admits her English is limited, helps other women - for it js often the mother who is at home that doesn't learn the new language while father and children must learn to sueak and write English.

language while rather and learn to speak and write English.

But another more important lesson is there as well. "I know, coming from another country, what a wonderful place Canada is. Canadians complain a lot and there are things that can be done to make Canada a better country. But what native born Canadians do not know is that Canada is the best country in the world. They should always remember that." Something

NOEL'S NOTES BY NOEL STOCKTON

I wouldn't doubt that most of you are-aware of the idiomatic variations between the English and the Canadian languages. What I mean to say is that, although we are all supposed to be speaking the same mother tongue, the vernacular sometimes emerges with an excruciating discord and, implies something entirely foreign to the

Get Central Air Conditioning in the bargain!

For instance there's the classic difference between the sidewalk and the pavement; if you're in England you don't walk on the sidewalk at all, you walk on the pavement, and I wouldn't particularly care to try that on Bay Street in the rush hour. to try that on Bay Street in the rush hour, because I'd be squashed thinner than one of Aunt Jemima's pancakes before I got as far as the Radio Artists' Club, which is the joint I would be making for.

And could you see yourself sticking a fork into a prostitute, because that's what you would be doing if you were to attack a tart ip/Ondon the way we'do here.

And don't forget that in England if you lifted the hood you'd be doing, a ballet due with a gangster, but if you lifted the bonnet in Scotland you'd be raising your cap to some good-looking broad. And by the same token, if you were piling your lugagage into the trunk in England, you'd be stuffing it in your boot, and that wouldn't leave much room for your feet, would it?

So you can see how misleading this business can become, especially as there are a number of other examples of a more restricted nature that Joe Cembal wouldn't

Luftwaffe during the course of World War

And the reason for this little edifice being erased from the surface of the globe in so arbitrary a manner was the presence in that hamlet of a contingent of American in that hamlet of a contingent of American soldiery which was stationed there for the express purpose of participating in the Longest Day, being the impending invasion of Normandy. But Hitler, you see, had, somehow got wind of their presence there in that village, and he had sicked his Air Force on them with the idea of pulverizing the entire unit, in order to discourage any active participation on their part.

Fortunately the bombs all missed the base, but they did wreak considerable havoc on the church, the Red Lion Hotel and the local constabulary.

As luck would have it the onslaught took place on a Sunday morning, about eleven o'clock, so the church was empty; and although the Red Lion was actually closed although the Red Lion was actually closed at the time there were a couple of hundred soldiers wounded, as well as the local constable, whose bicycle was leaning on the wall at the front of the pub, and was completely annihilated.

However, the Luftwaffe had been eminently successful in placing a number of dents in the church, thereby rendering the nave and the chancel somewhat hors de combat for the duration.

The poor minister was naturally in a state of abject desolation, having nowhere to render his inspiring recitals to his minor group of dedicated parishioners for an hour or two each Sunday, who found it a restful haven while they recovered from the activities of the night before.

He was now compelled to make an arrangement with the local school principal for the use of his kindergarten facilities, which didn't do too much for his psyche.

Naturally the American troops were more than slightly discouraged at this turn of events; not that the destruction of the little church caused them any grave despondency or even inconvenience; but the collapse of the Red Lion hit them indescribably right below the plimsoll line. But as the years rolled by the invasion, like many another depressing component of that lunatic exercise, faded into the woonly mists of memory and the

So then and there he set himself upon a mission of remembrance.

First of all he sent a circular letter to all his former officers, suggesting to them that they should dig their fists deeply into their pouches and inaugurate a fund to provide for the resurrection of that church.

His notice was received with mixed

Ex-employees throw retirement party for Francis Rothermel

A habit of carrying a little black notebook with him to record facts and figures during a working day at Marmoraton Mine was reflected in one of the gifts presented to Francis Rothermel at a retirement party for him on Saturday, July 5, at the Relm Tavern. In addition to a Polaroid camera and carrying case. Mr. Rothermel received a plaque with the familiar black notebook mounted on it; this time containing the names of all those co-workers, friends and family

Don't touch another thing until you read this ad.

Lhe most important thing to remember when you're working with electricity is simply this: always keep a little common sense between you and your electricity.

> Common sense means waiting until your lawn is dry before cutting it with an electric mower.

And never building a tree house close to power lines, where children could be seriously injured.

There are many other ways to practise electrical safety. And they all have one very important thing in common.

Common sense.

Think about it, please.

Francis Rothermel retires after long career

One tends to think of retirements as an autumnal sort of thing: you know - the leaves fall from the trees, time to retire to the warmth of the hearth and forget the hustle bustle etc.

The latest personage to hit the sundown trail is the former number two man at the Marmoraton Mine, Mine Superintendent Francis Rothermel. Mr. Rothermel, although nor quite ready to be called over the hill, has, like to many other Marmorians, decided to call an early retirement when his time with the mine finished last month. He does not however, feat he will be properly retired until the feel he will be properly retired until the

Then we're going to do some travelling," Francis and his wife, Sara, have lived in Marmora for 16 years and plan to retire here. "I don't believe that we would have stayed here the length of time we did if we didn't really like it. It's been a great place to work at. As far as iron ore mines usually go, they're not normally in developed areas like this. There was hardly like this. There was hardly any turnover-out here, which is unusual. You get to know the men a lot better. I really enjoyed

The fact that he might not be quite ready The fact that he might not be quite ready to retire permanently is revealed by the resume he produces to help answer my questions on his background... or earlier, talking with a former employee now moved away who dropped into talk, asking "would they be interested in hiring a man of 60?" and the reply, "it just depends on the man." obviously makes him brighten a least.

Francis Rothermel isn't tired of working yet, it isn't because he hasn't been at it a long time or been involved in a number of different fields. He started working as a surveyor for his father when he was eighteen, going into business for himself at the same time as he began working for Bethlehem in 1942. At Bethlehem his work has been that of an

"engineer" although it's him to be involved in a number of different types of jobs in the field and in the plant, including setting up the Marmoraton Mine from July 53 to August 55.

It's also moved him around from his

He added that the timing of the operation might be complicated by other considerations. For instance there is a considerable amount of silver mixed with considerable amount of silver mixed with the arsenic and the ministry would like to extract and sell that at a time when the price of silver was high. Bill Domm takes on federal-provincial milfoil tangle to try to help strangled Kawarthas

Tourism, the basis of much of this area's economy is being seriously threatened.

The culprit is not the energy crisis or the sluggish economy, but an aquatic weed, Eurasian milfoil.

Milfoil strangles waterways with thick ever-multiplying growth that fouls boat motors, entangles game fish and tackle and makes swimming impossible.

The Kawartha system is the scene of the most serious problem with over 100,000 acres affected but Belmont Lake, Crowe Lake, the lower parts of the Crowe River and the Trent itself are also affected. And while the lakes are being choked by weeds, our governments are doing very little.

The provincial government ran a three test project on the Kawarthas using a large harvesting machine to cut and bring ashore literally tons of the stuff but that project ended two years ago and no new programs are planned. Neither has the federal government been involved in doing anything in the Kawarthas or the other lakes which are a provincial responsibility although it is using harvesters and chemicals in clogged channels of the Trent-Severn Waterway which is a federal Peterborough M.P. Bill Domm wants to change this and get the province and the federal government working together on the problem. "Since the milfoil migrated to Kawarthas through the Trent-Severn, I feel that the federal government has s responsibility to help in the control of the weeds but the lakes are a provincial responsibility, so we have to have a co-operative program."

So far he is doing quite well in his campaign to protect the $100 million industry his riding depends upon. He showed me a copy of Hansard (the record of the goings on in Parliament) from June of the goings on in Parliament) from J 17, 1980. "I brought this up at

Peterborough M.P. Bill Domm

Committee on Forestry and Fisheries and got a good response from the Minister of Environment. What I have suggested is that the federal government redirect some of the money already earmarked for millfoll research into a control program. We can go on researching this forever but we already know that harvesting, going in and taking the tops of the plants and catting them away, can keep the problem under control. In fact we started to notice some remission in the weed after the provincial harvesting in the weed after the provincial harvesting experiment in 1977 when I was county

Both the Federal and Provincial Both the Federal and Provincial governments have spent substantial amounts of money on researching the millful problem and are continuing to do so. In 1977 and 78 the province spent about $270,000 doing a field test of a large harvesting machine and researching possible uses for the harvested milfoil.

This has run into a brick wall of cost:
"The program showed that the milfoil could be used for composting into a soil conditioner and as a feed for poultry and conditioner and as a feed for poultry and livestock but it lacks some basic nutrients making it necessary to use additives to make it a complete feed. This makes cost about the utthe same as commercial feeds", said Geoff Carpentier, District Pesticide Specialist, Ministry of Environment (Ontario), Peterborough Office.

The Federal government has spent a total of $900,000 on research and control programs in the past four years. This money was spent in three areas; ecological methods of control and the potential environmental impact of 2,4-D in chemical control programs; development of har-vesting machines; and control programs in the Trent-Severn and Rideau. They have looked into using such things as special carp and swans to eat the millful;

as special carp and swans to eat the milfoil; unfortunately these promising proposals didn't pan out. The carp also would eat the game fish while the swans, according to some reports, were a particularly fierce breed that didn't like children. The harvesting machine has been more promising: most of the machine develop-ment money went to Limnos Ltd, which has built and tested a harvester and is wachine

2.4-D the milfoil cure may be worse than the disease

BY PAUL McKAY

With the absence of any government mechanical weed harvesting program in the Kawarthas this summer, area cottage, marina and resort owners will be under increasing pressure to fight the annual invasion of Eurasian milfoil with chemical herbicides.

That may provide a short term antidote for the milfoil that plagues our $100 million local tourist industry, but in the long term this strategy may be a case of the cure being worse than the disease.

New medical evidence from internationally respected health agencies has seriously called inso question the long-term safety of 2,4-D - the chemical herbicide used almost exclusively in the Kawartha Lakes to combat Eurasian Milfoil.

When 2,4-D is applied to maturing milfoil plants, it triggers an intense increase in the metabolic (growth) rate, which eventually causes death and which eventually cause death and decomposition. Because applications are often made under less than ideal offen made under less than ideal conditions, however, milfoil congestion can often return by August, according to Geoff Carpentier of the local Ministry of Environment office. As well, the chemical must be applied annually.

While this herbicide has been in wide use since 1947, especially in agriculture, recently health scientists have begun to challenge its reputation as a completely safe chemical herbicide.

On January 1, the US Environmental Protection Agency placed 2,4-D and its derivatives on their Class 1 'suspected derivatives on their Class I suspected carcinogen' (cancer-causing) list, and on April 28 they ordered all US manufacturers of 2,4-D to begin extensive new health studies or face a federal suspension of their. licences. In the past this regulatory process resulted in the complete ban of DDT.

Local ministry of Environment officials estimate they will issue 1,000 property permits this summer for private application of the commercial 2,4-D products, AquaClean. Geoff Carpentier said that these permits represent several hundred pounds of pure 2,4-D. He emphasized, however, that aquatic

He emphasized, however, that aquatic treatment represents only a fraction of the total 2,4-D use in the area, with agricultural and government spray pro-grams accounting for the vast majority. He said the MOE is satisfied that 2,4-D is an 'acceptably safe' part of a combined chemical, harvesting and biological milifoil control program, if the herbicide is applied responsibly.

This statement was echoed by Wayne Wolski, spokesman for Dow Chemical in Wolski, spokesman for Dow Chemical in Sarnia, One of Canada's largest producers of 2,4-D. "2,4-D should present no problems if you read the label and follow instructions. Any objections to 2,4-D can't possibly be based on scientific fact."
When questioned about the EPA's recent order to have all US 2,4-D manufacturers conduct new health tests, Wolski said. "The EPA is merely telling the public what they want to hear. They're

"You got that? Assets are $400,000. Liabilities are $300,000. Total cash income last year was $150,000. But I can show you figures to prove that it cost me $105,000 assy ear just to keep this place going. My interest payments alone were $35,000. I managed to pay only $20,000 on the principal. It cost me around $15,000 to keep my family fed and clothed.

"Total it up, man. It comes to $175,000. That's what it cost me to keep going last year. I made only $150,000. I lost $25,000."

Why? Why?

Because input costs - that $105,000 - were too high. He paid more for fertilizers, herbicides, replacements, interest. He received less for the final product than the four previous years, so he is in a financial bind.

When the day the hours that all the

What can he do? He knows that all the guessperis in Ottawa, Toronto and the universities are predicting a further 12 per cent decline in farm income this year for the same reason as last year: costs are soaring, especially energy. And the final price for his product is going to be less. Hog prices have dropped from abot 53 cents average last year to 48 cents this year. That's a drastic drop for him. It means he'll have to do a lot of figuring and means he ll have to do a lot of tiguring and cutting and scrimping and saving if only to keep his losses as low as last year. Where will he cut? Well, he'll lower his standard of living.

He'll try to chop three or four thousand dollars from his family expenses. He will not get his already-dilapidated truck repaired. He will not get a holiday but he hasn't had one for three years anyway. He will not buy any new equipment unless he has a major breakdown. He is like many others. And that is why

He'll have a long talk with his banker and ask for a deferred payment on his principal. He may get that deferred payment but his interest rates will increase and, he'll pay the bank more money in interest alone in fact, more than twice as much - as he pays himself.

And he's bucky. He has enough equity in his operation to do it. Pity the poor farmer whose net worth is much less than $100,000, the young guy who started on a shoestring and is in hock to his ears. The banks will not - they cannot - extend more credit. The equity is reduced so low that he risk is too great.

Still the distance only adds to its charm, providing you leave yourself time for the trip. Although the Gut is a good two mile walk once you do come to the end of the road leading into it, that should be changed by the end of the summer as CVCA summer students are now working on a master plan for the park and will probably help to put a road through to within 600 yards of the Gut by the end of August.

Another longer trail about five miles in length will longer trail about five miles in length will eventually traverse the entire 400 acre property and also in the works are a picnic area right at the Gut and a bridge that will cross the river about half a mile down cross the river about half a mile down stream. A barrier set up on the Gut will prevent people from plunging into the gorge as did the bus driver for the gorge as did the bus driver for the inaugural tour four years ago and toilets will complete the inroads of civilisation in

Loretta Shannon, one of the CVCA students working on the park noted, "It would be unfortunate if they made it too would be unfortunate it they made it too parklike. Its nice to make it more accessible to people, but it should be as wild as possible."

Still anyone who misses the Gut can be put in the same class as the Torontonian who has never been up the CN Tower. It's foolish to ignore wonders in your own backyard.

Work and education mix

While for most of those seeing the Gut, it is just an exciting experience, a look at the unusual beauty of nature, for Sharon Dafoe unusual beauty of nature, to students it is also a challenge - an opportunity to put what's she's learned to work and to learn while she's working.

Sharon from R.R. 1. Norwood, is a first year student in forestry at Sault College in Sault Ste. Marie who's working this summer under the Summer Youth Employment for the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority. Part of her job has been to map the Gut Conservation Area-classifying the various types of forest and terrain, planning where to place the nature trails, picnic areas and road into the site and where to put the bridge across the gorge.

EDITOR'S VIEWPOINT

An old, and much more interesting, way to settle

BY JEANNETTE MOORE

Last week as we celebrated Canada Day and our U.S. neighbours their national holiday we patted ourselves on the back and congratulated each other that despite the flaws of our parliamentary systems has been in the history of our peoples a better way of handling our social differences

Well, that idea has gained ground because we never bothered to find out what better ways native Canadians and Americans might have had. In at least one respect the Inuit people had a system of dealing with social problems that outstrips ours and was at the same time practised with flair, humour and imagination. In many areas of the Canadian north and in Alaska the Eskimos settled differences by "dueling songs" or "ridicule songs".

The custom is explained in a book published in 1979 by Chandler and Sharp entitled Eskimos and Explorers by wendell H. Oswald, a university professor who has spent 20 seasons in field work among the various Eskimo groups and has studied everything written about them. studied everything of 18th Century visitors to North America who encountered Eskimos he tells how one person challenged another to a/singing duel if he was displeased with the person's behaviour. "Beforehand the two contestants composed songs, and these were sung before an eager audience. The challenger first presented his 'taunting ditties' to the beat of his drum and the challenged responded in kind. To the delight of the assembled listeners songs were exchanged until one man's inventory was exhausted and he lose the duel. After a dispute was settled, in this manner, the loser could not overtly express any ill feelings. The aim of a song duel was the prevention of serious antisocial behaviour, the essence of many legal systems. The humaneness of this means for deterring disharmony was consistent with the Eskimo ideal of avoiding

And again:

And again:
"Dueling songs composed by adversaries were sung over long periods of time, often for years. The duelists, women or men, visited one another after they had composed and practiced new songs of contempt. They stood facing each other in the open before an audience. Real offenses were exaggerated, the sins of ancestors recounted, and accusations made about uncommitted crimes. Male opponents might strike each other on the forehead during an exchange and mock one another, to the delight of the audience. In at least some exchanges it appears that a duelist who outlived his opposite was the winner."

Now I call that a proper way to settle a dispute and liven the general workaday scene. On the federal front such tactics could provide many hours of low-cost television entertainment as Energy Mini-ster Marc Lalonde in a fine baritone and stern of brow would sing out to the tune of A-Hunting We Will Go:

"I'm going to get that oil, Your nasty tricks I'll foil, The prices must not rise, Agree if you are wise

Then Premier Lougheed: "The oil is in our ground, Out West here's where it's found, We'll not give it away,

On behalf of our client,

The rest of you will pay-pay-pay".

On the local acene the system would work even better and provide more potential for entertainment when the antagonists got down to personalities and initiative line insults. Council meetings would not be so apt to put the audience to sleep; on the contrary, they would probably provoke a great deal of interest in public affairs it councillors came to meetings prepared to settle their differences with song.

How about the present CVCA dispute?
Councillor Clifford Biggs of Havelock, accompanying himself and drowning out all opposition by beating on a drum might sing to the CVCA chairman:

"John Wilkes I tried to alarmya When you moved 'gainst my wishes to Marm'ra

At the time I said John, Ere this season is gone, We'll leave the Authority, darnya".

Next John Wilkes: "Your threats will all come to woe, You Havelockian type of a foe, Stop all this dissension Or my vowed intention Is to see that you're made to drink Crowe".

You see how easy it is when you get started.

Of course, a vestige of this native custom is found in the protest songs of groups like the Toronto Island home owners who last week held a rally and sang to the tune of O'Canada:

"No. No. No. We've got no place to go".

But where was the chorus from Metro foronto to sing:

"Yes, yes, you'll leave We'we got a bigger peave, You'll have to toe the mark. We need this for a park.

Yes, I think we should form a society for the bringing back of the old Canadian custom of dueling songs.

Riverview Park and Z

The spring has brought a new addition to the bison family who reside in the northmost pen at the Riverview Park and Zoo.

The baby bison was born in mid-May and already weighs 125 pounds. Both mother and child are doing very well, says zoo manager Wally Davidson, and the proud parents are glad to show off their new family member to visitors. A new elk has just been born as well.

The elk and the bison are not the only new additions to the zoo this summer. Full-length feature movies, suitable for the whole family, are shown every Thursday night ithrough the summer from June 26 to Labour Day weekend. Mr. Davidson urges local residents and visitors to bring lawn chairs and watch the films under the stars. Films such as Tom Sawyer and Flipper will be among those screened.

"Maybe we'll have some little beavers eventually," he said.
Zoo management has also added on about $7,000 worth of new playground equipment, including an 80-foot slide and creative playground.
The zoo train still makes regular trips through the park site, and one new feature this year is a 40-foot tunnel over the track.
The tunnel is constructed of structural steel, covered with dirt and seeded over with grass. It should be finished by mild July.

Another project underway is a lookout over the river with stairs for easy access.

Mr. Davidson said 272,000 people visited the zoo last year and, judging by past trends, he expects more people this year.

The large majority of people visit during the summer.

Mr. Davidson said he wants to add different varieties of animals to the zoo population in the coming years.

Harvesters push "environmentally safe alternative"

I met Jack on my way to take some photographs of the weed harvester in action. "Follow me", he said as he drove down an old country road hauling a trailer that looked like it could carry anything. Suddenly, he stopped in the middle of the road. I skidded to a stop just before ramming his trailer. Then stopped in the middle of the road. I stoders to a stop just before ramming, his trailer. Then he got out and we walked around to the front of the pickup. Engine trouble I thought. No. a second later he walked across the road carrying a small turtle placing it safely off the road. When I mentioned the incident later, he said. "Oh that's about the thirtieth turtle since we've been out here."

I sat down with Jack in a marina snack bar as he waited for Peter and the harvester to drive across the lake. "He'll have to hook-up with me because it takes two people to handle the harvester." The two people to handle the narvester. Interest thing Jack wanted to tell me about was their unique machine. It was built in Trenton by its designer Gary Troke, a Perth, Ontario inventor. "We have the first machine ever built. It is actually a prototype which needs alot of modifications." works."

So far Mr. Troke has built ten of the nachines; two have been sold to Aquation Weed Harvesting and two to the New York State Conservation Authority. They cost about $7,000 each for which you get a flat bottom scow, the harvesting boom and bottom scow, the harvesting boom and cutter and the hydraulics to operate it. The motor to power scow and a trailer to transport it you have to find yourself.

Jack then explained to me how their system works. "The boat is equipped with a cutter much the same as a hay cutter bar and a chain-like conveyor belt which can be lowered five or six feet under the surface and cuts the milfoil and the conveyor puts the cut weeds in the boat. Removing the the cut weeds in the boat. Removing Ine weeds from the water is very inportant and it is one of the reasons harvesting is better than herbicides. Weeds dumped back into the water sink to the bottom and form a highly nutritious mulch that fertilizes next year's crop. In removing the weeds from the water you can actually slow the rate of recovery - something chemicals can't do."
"Does the idea of going into a completely new business providing an almost unheard of service frighten you?" I t unheard of service frighten yo

"No not really, we feel that time is on our side. We estimate that within two or three years herbicides will be banned in Ontario like they already have been in many parts of the United States as a result of the growing amount of research that of the growing amount of research that indicates the detrimental effects of 2,4-D and other chemicals. That will leave only harvesting to control milfoil."

Aquatic Weed Harvesting has also done their homework on milfoil and how to combat it. "The weed grows in two cycles.

Over a period of years this treatment will cause a regression in this treatment will cause a regression in the development of the plant which will allow other plants etc. to grow. In this way you can actually bring the milfoil under control. Chemicals will kill the plant yes. but it is only a one shot deal. Next year the

What Mr. Domm has suggested to both What Mr. Domm has suggested to the Federal and provincial governments is that the federal government come up with $100,000 for a provincial operated harvesting program. This would require a similar the province to contribute a similar amount. "I think that this is the only way that we can get anything done about the With lakes being a provincial responsibility, the Ontario government has to be involved the federal government can't come in and do it but it should recognize its responsibility for the problem recognize its responsibility for the profile because to the Trent-Severn." To show the support for his proposal Mr. Domm returned to his files and showed me letters from John Turner and Russell Rowe, both local M.P.P.s and members of the local M.P.P.s and members of the governing Conservative party which indicated that they support the idea. The next step. says Mr. Domm, is a meeting that has been called by Peterborough County for later this month. "Representatives of the federal, provincial governments and conservation authorities have been invited to take part. We are considering asking the conservation authorities, if they would be interested in operating the harvesting program under a provincial sponsorship. We hope that if we can begin getting together now, we will have a control program operating in 1981. overnments and conservation authorities have a control program operating in 1981 or an owners' association can offer us a number of jobs in one area. Please tell your readers to give us a call before they put that garbage in their lakes. We are very sy to get along with." Finally, Peter arrived with the harvester. That's the ugliest thing I have ever seen I thought to myself as he approached the dock. Peter, Chuck and Jack had a quick discussion on the dock. "Over as far as those cedars and back to the birches over there," shouted Chuck over the din of the

"Get aboard John" called Jack and we'

As soon as I climbed aboard I knew I made a mistake. Jack and Peter were wearing deck shoes and no socks for a reason - everything was wet. The only place for me to sit was on the hydraulic reservoir and it got hot, although it was a good place to photograph Jack forking

The work itself is a monotonous job of going back and forth in front of two cottage lots, like mowing a very wet lawn for two hours. After about an hour of this Jack nours. After about an industry in a super-turned to me, pitch fork full of milfoil in handland said, "Offering an environment-ally safe alternative can be boring."

Rabies may be controlled by meatballs

If you have a dog, you probably make sure that he receives his rabbies vaccination, to protect your pet from this contagious disease. Could the same vaccine be applied to the wild animals, such as foxes and skunks, that transmit rabbies? In a major study financed through the Ministry of Natural Resources, scientists are hoping to develop an oral vaccine that could be used to protect these vulnerable species of wildlife.

Rabbies is a major problem in Ontario,

Rabies is a major problem in Ontario, with an average of 1500 cases per year reported in animals, and about 800 to 1000 ople vaccinated each year because of posure. While there hasn't been a human death due to rabies since 1967, the Ontario government still spends $7 million each year in rabies control measures such as vaccinating pets and livestock, diagnosing suspected cases, and compensating farmers for lost animals.

Such was not always the case. The present strain of rabies, transmitted by wild animals, was unknown in Ontario until the 1950's. Perhaps due to a high population of northern foxes in that decade, the disease was able to spread across northern Ontario from its Arctic origins, where it had been known for centuries.

If the present three-year research program is successful, wild foxes and skunks would be made immune by eating meatballs containing vaccine. Thousands of the meatballs would be spread through likely habitat by being dropped from planes or spread by landowners, a process that is being tested this summer in Huron County to see how well these baits are accepted.

In the meatime, rabies can usually be In the meatime, rabies can usually be avoided by using common sense. If a wild animal is acting unusual or seems to have no fear of you, keep your distance. If you are bitten, make sure you contact your doctor, and keep the animal's carcass for testing if possible. But for the sake of both our pocketbooks and our wildlife, let's hope that effective rabies control is close at hand.

Heritage Week - a step into the past draws community together

This year's Heritage Week celebrations may have turned out to be the catalyst that brought different organizations and the community as a whole together and involved them in one of the best days that Madoc has seen in quite some time. It appears that a theme has finally been discovered that will bring business people and service clubs together to give Madoc a reputation of success in its endeavours. Heritage Week, was the brainchild of the Madoc and District Historical Society and made and District Historical Society and was eventually put in the hands of the students working in Heritage House These students, while initially meeting with some opposition, decided to put their efforts into a project that would and could benefit everyone in the community. The determination and desire to succeed that these students exhibited finally paid off involving businesses, organizations and individuals in an event that turned out to be a pleasant surprise to all involved. Once the students decided not to let one organization take over Heritage Week, they worked to involve the businesses on the mainstreet, surrounding area business-the mainstreet, surrounding area businesses, service clubs, church groups and individuals. In the end, the community sponsored Heritage Week showed that this community can work together and can put on a very successful event.

One of the highlights of Heritage Week was Madoc's own museum, called Heritage House. Since the inception of the Historical Society, many people have worked long and hard towards a community museum that would deal strictly with Madoc's past. This year, thanks to hard work on the part of the Historical Society, the students and many individuals in the community, this dream individuals in the community, this dream was realized and, as more and more people become aware of its existance, support and become aware of its existance, support and interest in the project continues to grow. Displays and exhibits within the house got off to a slow start, despite the hard work of the students who were trying to organize our museum. Tracey Morrison, Carol Whiteman and Doug Adams had committed themselves to having Heritage House agen for the public during Heritage House open for the public during Heritage Week and they weren't going back on their word. Working feverishly and with the help of local history buffs, they were able to open the doors of Heritage House and show some of our local artifacts to both local people and tourists in the area for the summer. Now, after many people saw these exhibits during the weekend, it appears their job will become somewhat easier. People were impressed with their work and talents in organizing the displays work and talents in organizing tie displays with the result that new artifacts and information will now be donated to the Historical Society for the summer. "We were really happy with the results of Heritage Week," said Tracey Morrison, Heritage Week, "said Tracey Morrison, the project manager. "Many people were impressed with what we had done to this point but most people had artifacts or information for us that they are willing lo supply for the museum. It looks like the project has captured the hearts of the people in this area, so we're hoping the museum will soon give a good picture of the complete cross-section of early life in Madoc."

During Heritage Week, these students added to the old time atmosphere by dressing in period costumes, a theme picked up by businesses and individuals also involved in the wekend of events, which allowed those entering Heritage House to really feel that they had gone back in time. The 5 cent lemonade and the penny candy that they sold in front of the house did nothing to detract from that atmosphere. And, many of the people partaking of these delights showed their appreciation by making donations to the museum. "We're exhausted but we're also very happy with the way Heritage House was received by the people of Madoc and the surrounding area," said Miss Morrison late Saturday afternoon.

The streets of Madoc were crowded on Saturday as the Heritage Week Sidewalk Sale took place. Beautiful, sunny weather

Huntingdon Council has problem with livestock killings

Huntingdon Township Council continues to have a problem with livestock being killed by dogs and wolves and, while they to nave a prooten with investors being skilled by dogs and wolves and, while they are handling the problem in the best manner they know of, some area farmers are not happy with the settlements. Mr. and Mrs. P.J. Keenan and Mr. Bob. Rodgers attended the regular council meeting on July 8th to try to get a better settlement on several sheep killed on their farm this year. It was Mr. Keenan's opinion that the sheep were worth considerably more than he was paid by the council but, while council was sympathetic towards his demands, they felt that thanging the evaluation would only undermine his position and that they were obligated to take the evaluator's advice because he had actually seen the sheep because he had actually seen the sheep while council had not. Council related to Mr. Keenan that there seemed to be several problems involved with the evaluation of his sheep. It could not be determined, in some cases, how the sheep had been killed. It also appeared that some of the sheep had been moved and Mr. Rodgers admitted that, at one and Mr. Rodgers admitted that, at one time, the sheep were moved by a hired hand but were replaced at the site of the killing very shortly thereafter. Council also felt that a strong enough presentation had not been made by Mr. Keenan to the evaluator at the time of the killings. They advised Mr. Keenan to recontact the evaluator and, if the evaluator wanted to change his evaluation, council would also change his evaluation, council would also consider the new evaluation. However, they felt they were working well within the guidelines set down for them and they felt their evaluator should have the final say on any killings in the township.

The problem of livestock killings has been haunting Huntingdon and other area municipalities for several years. Dogs are municipalities for several years. Dogs are felt to be the main problem but wolves and coyotes are also being seen and trapped in connection with these killings. Mr. Keenan reported that a coyote had been trapped recently near a field where his sheep were about to be moved and felt that it may have been the cause of some of his problems. Council feels that people in the area must take more responsibility for their domestic animals and keep them under control. More livestock claims were presented to council on that night, but it appeared that these killings could be attributed to wolves instead of dogs. Many attributed to woives instead or dogs. Many previous claims indicated that dogs were the major problem, with some claimants suggesting they would guard their sheep with guns and shoot any dogs coming near their herds. Several sheep farmers had already seen dogs near their herds but had already seen dogs near their herds but had already seen dogs near their herds had already seen dogs near their herds had already seen dogs near their herds near their he not had guns readily available. Council felt that farmers have the right to protect their property, although the shooting of an animal often caused hard feelings between

We have heard for weeks now about the loss of thousands of acres of forests in Northern Ontario. Very hot, dry weather has contributed to the worst fire situation the north has experienced in many years and, just as they begin to get some rain and think the fire flap is over, more hot weather or thunder and lightning(storms set in create more fires: rain last weekend brought many of the major fires under control but lightning and more hot weather have combined to start forty new fires within the next three days.

It takes a great deal of manpower to fight fires of the size and intensity of the northern fires. The first men on the scene will be the experienced firefighters who make a living fighting fires. Then, when these experienced firefighters run out, the normal procedure in the Tweed District of the Ministry of Natural Resources, is to call in people who have left their names to become emergency fire fighters (EFF), a system that works well for the much smaller fires of this district. However, for the larger and much more dangerous fires in the north, training in fire fighting techniques is essential. A mistake on a five hundred or thousand acre fire can mean that the fire will soon be two, three or four times as large and can also mean the loss of fife and valuable property.

techniques is essential. A mistake on a tive hundred or thousand arce fire can mean that the fire will soon be two, three or four times as large and can also mean the loss of life and valuable property.

So what so you do when you run out of experienced firefighters? The Tweed fire control centre is a very good example of what happens duting a long period of fires like the situation in Northern Ontario. Feeling that they can't just send untrained people into the north to fight fires that require all the knowledge of the regular unit crews to fight, they are giving the EFF on their list in Tweed an emergency firefighting course th resembles in many ways the courses their regular unit crews get, with the exception that these courses are condensed into one, week periods.

If you're like me, you are now wondering how a one week course compares to the years of courses and the experience that the regular unit crews have before they flight fires in the north. According to Floyd Caverly, the man in charge of fraining these auxiliary crews, the only difference between the auxiliary crews and the regular unit crews is the experience, and they try to compensate for that experience by supplying an experienced crew leader of the auxiliary crews. "The training these auxiliary crews get, it is just intensified noone week," said Mr. Caverly, and the other instructors were unanimous an their agreement. Several of the other instructors commented that they felt the instructors commented that they felt the instructors were getting was better than their initial training which, in other instructors were unanimous-m their agreement. Several of the other instructors commented that they felt the instruction these auxiliary crews were getting was betier than their initial-training which, in most cases, took place many years ago, "At that time, we didn't have the benefit of experienced instruction like these guys have because we were just introducing the program to the area and no one really had that much experience," said one of the other instructors. "Now, every one of us has many years of experience on the fire line and we can advise these attudents on the best ways to handle a situation from that experience."

Experience was the operative word,

that experience."

Experience was the operative word, according to Mr. Caverly. "Our unit crews have the benefit of years of experience when they fight fires. These auxiliary crews get the theory and training that our cases, before they start getting the experience also. We're training them to replace the unit crews who have been fighting fires up north for quite a length of time. Those unit crews are on the verge of exhaustion and they need some R and R if we want them to be in top shape while they fight fires. These auxiliary crews will give us more manpower and allow us to use our experienced personnel to the best advantage."

Sixteen men were trained in this latest, course. To this point, thirty other men had been trained and sent north, some of them scheduled to remain there until the end of the summer or the end of the fire flap, whichever comes first. The training was impressive. A normal day would consist of classroom theory in the morning and then putting that theory into practice in the field in the afternoon. These men would learn firefighting techniques, how to use the various equipment safely, how to clear a space so that a helicopter could land, how to direct that helicopter could land, how to direct that helicopter onto a landing site and safety around that helicopter. The training is directed at the situations the auxiliary crews will encounter in the north but will stand them in good stead if they were called to fight fires in the Tweed District, as well. "We're very confident in our training techniques", said Mr. Caverly, "and we're also very confident in these auxiliary crews. This training program will eventually serve a two-fold purpose. It will supply us with auxiliary crews to relieve our unit crews in this tituation but it will also give us a bank of experienced personnel for our own area. "At the present time, the fire situation in our area is very good because of the amount of rain we have been receiving. If that situation turns around and we start getting fires in our area, these fellows will be invaluable to us."

On the two days that I watched the training, the auxiliary crews were taught the do's and don'ts of working around fixed wing aircraft and helicopters as well as preparing slings for the helicopter. They also built pads and landing strips for the helicopter and learned how to set up camp in the bush.

As this course came to a close, the situation in the north had gotten progressively voorse. On Thursday, a total of one million, three hundred thousand acres of land had been burned in northern Ontario. In the whole Tweed District, there is only one million, six hundred thousand acres. One of the crew members back in Tweed on rotation commented, "It's the worst situation I've seen in my eleven years of fighting fires in the north. There is nothing but dust left after those fires. Everything is so dry that a small fire will develop into a large fire as you stand and watch."

Vankoughnet wants Liberals to keep indexing

Hastings-Frontenac Lennox and Adding-ton M.P. Bill Vankoughnet has blasted the Liberal government for considering a-bolishing indexing provisions on income

Mr. Vankoughnet, in a radio broadcast over CJBQ-CJNH Belleville on Sunday afternoon, charged that the measure would increase the annual income tax of a married man with two dependents earning $10,000 by 109 per cent next year. Indexing is the method by which the government allows basic deductions to keep pace with inflations or blat cost of living increases do allows basic deductions to keep pace with inflation so that cost of living increases do not put individuals in higher tax brackets. It was brought into effect in the mid-sixties.

The government is considering dropping indexing because it would increase revenues by 1.6 billion dollars and thus cut into the national debt. Vanhoughnet rejected this, saying it would be merely a drop in the bucket of 100 billion debt; he reiterated media criticism that it was "cowardly at best, despicable and dishonest" at worst and said the government should find more honest and open ways of raising the money or alternatively. cutting spending. alternatively, cutting spending.

Vankoughnet went on to chastize the government for campaigning against the Conservative proposal to levy an 18 cen per gallon excise tax on gasoline, only to consider this measure which he called "ruthless" by comparison.

The response to the programme through The response to the programme through registration and attendance has been excellent so far! The nine week programme is divided into two sessions: of daily half hour lessons. The first session, started June 23 and runs to July 28, has a full house of 82 students in 12 classes; many people were forced to register for the second session because there was not p time, space or instructors to accomodate them in the first one and so the programme already boasts an advance registration of approximately 30 students for the second session. The registration for the August programme will be held on July 25 and will be done a first come first serve basis.

Watch this paper for details.

Students are taught and evaluated in the Red Cross pupil training continuum which has seven levels; as well a Bronze Medallion class (one of the Royal Life Saving Society Canada awards) is held two afternoons a week for the entire summer. This class is open to good swimmers (Senior level and above) who are interested in furthering their swimming abilities and life-saving skills.

The programme also offers classes two evenings a week in Adult Aquastics. This consists of both "learn to swim" and "stroke improvement" levels. Presently there are eight people participating.

The classes are conducted by two experienced and fully qualified Red Cross Water Safety / Royal Life Saving Society Canada instructors: Kim Gaebel, who has been with the programme for six seasons now and Dana Winterburn who is in her fourth summer.

All classes but Adult Aquatics are held at Campkin's Camp Inn on the Quin-Mo-Lac road. Tadpoles to Senior are taught between 9:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon. The

Many people will remember the Big Red scare of the 50's and all the talk of building bomb shelters. This hysteria peaked in October 1962 when Jack Kennedy went eyeball to eyeball with the Russians over Cuba. Some people think those days of thermo-nuclear danger are gone.

They're not, In fact, they're back, and with all the concern about the Russian presence in Afghanistan and the prospect of gunslinger Ronald Reagan becoming president of the United States, it's no wonder people are talking seriously about president of the United States, it's no wonder people are talking seriously about nuclear was - and surviving it. Still, it was a surprise to some people when area police departments and other public information centres re-released a government pamphlet first published in 1961 called 'Survival in Nuclear War.' The government pamphlet first published in 1961 called "Survival in Nuclear War." The pamphlet in and of itself isn't very helpful, but the fact that it has been released once again has triggered attention to the prospect. NATO generals admit it may only two or three years before tensions between the two superpowers escalate to the point of firing nuclear weapons.

It's a popular belief that World War III sound end everything. But the truth is, some will survive, and their survivial would, or will, depend on protecting themselves from nuclear fallout.

Preparing Canadians for nuclear war was once the responsibility of the Canadian Emergency Measures Organization, part of the Department of National Defense. Now it comes under the realm of Emergency Planning Canada, the same organization that looks after planning measures, for earthquakes, floods and other natural disasters.

The Chief of Information services is Lesley Lynn, and she says planning for needless preparation for Canadians to

"By the year 2000, there will be 40 "By the gear 2000, there will be 40 nations capable of launching nuclear weapons," she told the HERITAGE. "In twenty years, Canadians have scarcely given survival in nuclear war a thought." And well we should, she adds.
"Since the crisis in Afghanistan, people can no longer live with the notion that detente will solve everything. We don't want to scare anybody, which is why we're not engaged in a full scale information

Until Emergency Planning perceives that the danger is imminent, subtle hints will have to serve, and some people are picking up the pamphlets. The most imformative and valuable article of information the department has to offer is a twenty year old booklet called "111 steps to Survival." The booklets are leftovers from the late time." and have been recovered Survival." The booklets are leftovers from "the last time", and have been recovered with Emergency Planning Canada stickers to cover up the old civil defence insignia. Though the advice hasn't changed, neither have the properties of nuclear fallout, which would be the biggest threat to most Canadians in the event of nuclear war.

Nobody knows it the Russians nave missiles trained at Canadian targets, but we can be certain that the mid-Atlantic industrial belt of the United States would be hit, and that prevailing currents

The hope of survival planners lies in the radiation life of widespead fallout areas; that is, that areas not directly attacked by missiles and affected by fallout from distant targets. The radioactivity in fallout weakens very rapidly in the first few hours after the explosion. Such weakening is called decay, and after seven hours, fallout decays by 90 percent. After this point, decay takes place at a much slower rate; at two days, 99 per cent of its strength will be gone and after two weeks, the radiation has only one tenth of one percent strength left. But even this low level of radioactivity can be harmful, depending on the level of radiation at the outset.

The only means of surviving the two weeks of most immediate danger is a fallout shelter, and on request, Emergency Planning will send you instructions on how to build such a shelter in your basement. According to them, shelters walled with 16 inches of solid brick, two feet of packed earth (three feet if loose), five inches of steel, three inches of lead or three feet of radiation.

Emergency Planning recommends that supplies to last 14 days would be sufficient to protect people from the strongest effects of radiation. Most important among supplies is a battery radio, In the event of a nuclear war, the Canadian Emergency Broadcasting System, comprised of radio and television stations across the country, would inform the survivors when it is a safe to emerge from the shelters, and what to do after leaving them. The armed foreswould look after monitoring levels of radiation and would be able to determine the earliest possible date for leaving the

The program to prepare Canada for a nuclear catastrophe has been continuing steadily since the late 1950's. The broadcastring system was set up in the sixties; and a network of 1,700 sirens from sixties) and a network of 1,700 stress from coast to coast has long been ready for use. The signal, incidentally, is a long undulating tone lasting for three to five minutes. The whole warning system is not completely operational now, but if international events escalate fears of a nuclear war, a crash education and facility.

The Department of Public Works has been proceeding with a fallout shelter program since 1965, and by 1970, about 70,000 buildings had been surveyed in Canada and over 53 million potential shelter spaces had been identified for use against radioactive fallout. Most of the

BY BOB TROTTER

Whoever can make two ears of corn, or wo blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together. With apologies to Jonathon Swift and Gulliver, I offer this quote. Canadian farmers have been doing just that for 50 years or more. Although the number of farmers on the land in this country dwindles every year, production continues to increase.

As a farm writer for more than 20 years. As a farm writer for more than 20 years. I have suggested on hundreds of occasions that Canadians are squandering prime farmland. Every now and again, somebody disputes the idea. A fellow farm writer laughed—if me recently for saying that, someday, Canadians will grieve for land that is lost to highways, power corridors, subdivisions, shopping plazas and tickytacky houses.

It just gets worse and worse

Just last week, the owner of a huge feed mill stopped me in the bank and laughed a my suggestion that Ontario should take major steps to preserve the land that is left the province.

in the province."
"Hell, man, we can grow grain on rooftops if we have to," he said. "We don't need all this farm land."
So, feeling chasterized, I pulled in my orns and decided not to say much more about farm land disappearing

Until last week when Joe Hulse, head of agriculture and food programs for the Development Research Centre in Ottawa, spoke to the graduating class at the University of Guelph.

He said exactly what I have been saying for years. The world is fast approaching a major food crisis which will prove far mo serious than the present energy crisis. He ought to know. He is in a position to see development in food production around the world as the top dog in Canada's research and development aid to needy countries. He maintains Canada is becoming more dependent on food imports. He quoted an Old Italian proverb to the effect that hunger delivers a man up to his enemy. He feels this country needs a whole new agricultural economic order because 75 per cent of the Canadian farm land taken out of production in the last 10 years was prime of production in the last farm land.

"As a result of our mindless shortsightedness, we are rapidly losing our self-sufficiency in both food and fuel," he said.

'Thirty years ago, we (Ontario) produced roughly the same weight and value of fruit and vegetables as we consumed. Now, we import about 60 per cent of the fruit and about 75 per cent of e vegetables we eat." Startling statistics, eh?

Five years ago, Canadians and Americans were worried about a global food shortage because the predicted deficit of edible cereal grains was about 40 million metric tonnes.

Today, he suggested, the situation is even worse yet few people seem concerned about it because we continually allow farm land to go out of production and give few incentives to farmers to stay on the land.

"From our best extrapolation, by 1990 the shortfall will lie between 100 and 150 million metric tonnes - that is between 2½ and 3½ times the 1975 deficit," he is quoted as saying.

Those are sobering figures. They mean a

Those are sobering ligures. They mean a lot of people - threequarters of the world population? - will not just go to sleep hungry at night. They will be more than hungry. They will be starving.

Northumberland Arts and Crafts Festival

"Quilt Auction"

BY JOHN BENNETT

Midweek is starting a new series of photo essays on area tourist attractions and activities. This week we sent our reporter John Bennett to the Northumberland Arts and Crafts Festival to find out what it is like at a quilt auction which was one of the many events of the festival held last Saturday and Sunday.

Last weekend's beautiful weather brought the largest crowds ever to the Northumberland Arts and Crafts Guilds Festival. The two day event featured displays by more than fifty area crafts people and artists a free open air concert and an auction of 154 handmade quilts. The quilt auction was the featured presentation on Sunday afternoon. The sale was run by auctioneer Roy Williams of Campbellford who took more than three hours to complete the bidding on the quilts. "The quilts have been made by many local organizations many of whom have been working on them for close to a year" said Lillian Potten, Treasure of the Northumberland Arts Guild.

The arts and crafts displays filled the arena floor and offered festival goers the opportunity to see and purchase the work of many of local crafts people including artists, wood workers, pottery, crochet, taxidermy quilting, leather work and more.

The success of this year's festival according to guild members will mean that the festival will return again next year.

WOODS, WATER & WILDLIFE

BY RON REID

A warm summer evening in the marsh can be a noisy occasion, full of chattering swallows, squabbling blackbirds, and the rising and falling crescendo of frogs. Bu the strangest of marsh sounds is heard only occasionally - the "wild weird love song" of the American bittern.

This reclusive member of the heron family produces a three-part pumping sound that resembles an old-fashioned stake driver or perhaps a wooden pump stake driver or perhaps a wooden pump-hence the strange name of thunder-pumper. This series of notes, which could hardly be described as a song, is difficult to describe, much less to imitate. Perhaps the closest we can come is to imagine a deep, guttural "pump-er-lunk" or "plum-pudd"." But once you have heard the strange cry of the bittern, no written description is necessary to remember it for a lifetime. a lifetime.

The bittern is a solitary bird, nesting on a mud platform disguised amongst the reeds. Even though the adults are large about the size of a crow, their brown, and beige streaking and characteristic obse, with neck extended and beak pointed skyward, provides a perfect bleint into the light and shadow of a cattail parsh. Their first line of defence against discovery is to freeze motionless, but if disturbed, they rise in clumsy flight with dampling legs and a startled cronk. a startled cronk.

A bittern hunting looks like a bittern resting, with its starionary pose. But when the unwary frog or minnow ventures within reach, his end is swift and sure, skewered by a lightning lunge of that shining beak. No one is quite sure yet how the bittern pumps its 'song, although it seems to somehow gain resonance by swallowing air. The sound seems almost literally to be pumped out, for it is accompanied by an incredible series of neck and head contortions. But no matter how it is accomplished, the song of the bittern is without doubt the strangest of sounds to echo across a summer marsh.

EDITOR'S VIEWPOINT

The other side of Terry Fox's run

Last weekend I spent an hour or so sitting in front of the Marmora IGA, taking donations for the Terry Fox cancer-research fund. It was, like the whole Terry research tund. It was, like the whole Left me with a very interesting but it left me with a very ambivalent set of reactions. People were generous. People were reacting in a very human and humane way to an extraordinary effort. All that's been said over and over in many ways. But what said over and over in many ways. But what struck me as well was the darker more negative aspect of the whole affair; the contradictions that people seem to live with so easily

"this is something we can all support."
It's a telling thing. We know that cigarette smoking, food additives and environ/tental hazards cause cancer. Yet rather fhan reduce our dependence on the noxious weed, be more careful of what we eat or after our lifestyle to suit our environment, we go on puffing away, eating junk food and pumping dangerous chemicals into the air and water.
We'll give lots of money but we don't want to do anything to prevent cancer. As a friend of mine observed, "We don't want to go halves. We're all holding out for a cure."

Now, I don't think any of this takes away from Terry Fox, his efforts, or his achievements. Nor do I think it takes away from people's generous response. But it does bearing looking at. Another anony-mous friend suggests that we should be donating to help stop Terry Fox. It would donating to help stop Terry Fox. It would be an interesting turn wouldn't is? Calvary. He is in great pain. He is risking rekindling the cancer. His motive is to really make people look at cancer. Do we need this sort of macabre show to make us do it? It looks like it.

Not, I think, that he wouldn't be doing it Not, I think, that he wouldn't be doing it if he didn't raise a cent; he struck me as having both public and private reasons for making this run and most of us spend our lives far less fruitfully. But the point is that next year we won't have Terry Fox running and the half of the raises. Do we across Canada to help fight cancer. Do we need something more pathetically in-spiring for 1981?

I'm not suggesting cancer isn't 90 per cent mystery. We don't know what causes it. But we can make an awful lor of correlations - cigarettes, certain food additives, certain things we pump into our air have all been proven to co-exist with suspiciously high levels of cancer. The evidence is there and the number of cancer causing agents is almost mindboggling.

Maybe that's why we don't act.

But I don't think that's it. I think we're too lazy and too affluent. It's much easier to give $20 to cancer than give up smoking or be more careful of one's diet. We're ising it as conscience money, buying our own slow and painful deaths in some cases. No doubt this will seem to some as an No doubt this will seem to some a sum unnecessarily black response to Terry Fox's inspiring run. Myself, I got the impression that Terry would like people not only to give but to think why they're giving.

Of the two, thinking is obviously more painful. The most painful thing, however, is actually doing something. And that is why Terry Fox is so unique. Unfortunately.

The Mississauga evacuation demon-strates the almost alarming readiness of the government to protect citizens from such disasters, and their efforts scoffed at during the early seventies when 'detente'

What of civilization and the way of life

we'd still have the government. NOEL'S NOTES

BY NOEL STOCKTON

Just by way of a diversion I thought this week I'd try a little change of pace. A change is as good as a rest, they tell me, and you know how lazy I am. Did you know, for example, that I like to

Not only do I like to cook, I also like to bore people with my recipes, and that's precisely what I aim to do right now.

People often say to me, Noel, they say, how come you set yourself up as an expert in the culinary arts, when truly you know enough about it to fill the bottom of a thimble.

So I say to them in return, I say, I don't really profess to be an expert at all, it's simply that I like to experiment and I do enjoy good food well cooked, and who

But I do find, with all the due modesty, that I appreciate my own cooking more than that of any of the poshest, fanciest and most expensive restaurants in Toronto.

Another thing, as I've mentioned before, I don't for a moment expect to tell you good addes how to go about it, because that ladies how to go about it, because that would be presumptive on my part, but hat I am in fact trying to do is to persuade he menfolk to give you girls a rest on one of these fine days, by noshing up, once in a shile, and giving the old girl a well ieserved respite from the hot kitchen. I even filled the front page of a ewspaper one time with a treatise on how o bake bread, which I understand went lown fairly well, and one young wife called to say I'd saved her marriage, so I can't e ALL bad.

But today I want to tell all vou culinary

But today I want to tell all you culinary inded gents how to make fishcakes.

I can hear you saying FISHCAKES, like hat, quite loudly under your breath, we an buy fishcakes in the supermarket, eady made.

Well, I don't mind telling you, the kind

f fishcakes I'm going to write about today ou're not going to find in any grocery freezer

But enough of this preamble, let's get down to business, as the actress said to the

Now what we are about to embark up may prove to be a rare old treat for the lit lady one of these evenings when to doesn't feel like cooking after a hard & doesn't feel like cooking after a hard & with the kids. So you simply say to her, dear, you say, instead of you having to on your pinny and go into slavery in thaming kitchen, you say, I'll cook you meal tonight for a change! That's what you say.

By all means use fish if you can get your hot little hands o'but I've always found that frozen fish of the job equally well.

So get the frozen cod from supermarket; it comes in an oblong the kid's ruler to measure the things, just take a running guess at it. So put the carrots on to boil lightly, but you should be careful to take them off before they're quite done, because they have to cook just a little while longer when you add the melted butter and stuff. Don't forget to add that palmful of salt to the carrots as 'well. If you are wondering exactly what I mean by a palmful, it's just enough salt to sit in the palm of your hand in a circle, about an inch and a half across.

The next thing to do is to get the fresh beans out of the garden, if you have them, and out of the freezer if you don't.

Naturally you can use frozen beans but as you know there is no comparison between the frozen and the fresh when it comes to nicely now on the stove.

So far so, good: we have the fish simmering, the potatoes boiling and the carrots and beans sweetly bubbling away to beat the band. The fish should take about a quarter of an hour and the spuds make around twenty minutes. maybe around twenty minutes.

maybe around twenty minutes:

When the fish is soft enough to mash it up and the potatoes are likewise, take them both off the light, mash them separately with a fork, then get a fairly large bowl and put the mashed potatoes and the mashed fish in it and swish the whole mess around with a wooden spoon until you have a nice pasty blob there. Mis it well with the spoon to make sure the fish and the potatoes are all nicely welded together.

Now take from the fridge two eggs. Once of these we are going to put into the fish and potato misture, the other one we put in a pan and boil it hard on the stove, because that's the egg we're going to use for the egg sauce. Bit sk the first egg and put it in a small bowl where you can swish it around with a fork until the white and the yolk are well mixed, then pour it into your potato and fish mixture and give it a bit of a slosh to mix it well in. The idea of the egg is that it binds the mixture together and makes it easier to form the required patties without them crumbling and all falling apart in your hands.

Having successfully achieved this little bit of nonsense we are ready to go ahead apart in your hands.

Having successfully achieved this little bit of nonsense we are ready to go ahead and shape our fishcakes to size.

First they have to be floured, so take half a cup of all purpose flour and sprinkle it on a board or something and season it well with pepper and salt. If you like plenty of seasoning then be my guest and go to town on it, but if you are a moderate then be fairly sparing with it, but suit yourself.

However, without any seasoning at all you might find the things just a little bit blab when you come to get your molars into them, and we don't want that, do we?

To form the patties take a ball of the mixture in your hand and squash it into a flat, round cake, about two and a half inches wide and approximately three quarters of an inch thick. Make as many as you can, but you'll generally find that the quantities of fish and potatoes you've used will conjure up about six fishcakes, so if there are only two of you that'll make two each for dinner and that will be plenty. You each for dinner and that will be plenty. You can save the other two for sbreakfast because fishcakes, like stews and shrimp creoles are always better tasting the creoles are always better tasting the second day.

Having shaped your patties, dip them well in the flour, already seasoned, making sure they are well covered top and bottom and along the edges, and then we can fry them.

So get out the frying pan and pour into it about a quarter of an inch of cooking oil. It doesn't exactly matter, what oil you use, as long as it's a good quality vegetable oil. You can use lard or shortening if you the but a large prefer the cooking oil. like, but I always prefer the cooking oil.

Bus tours facing cancellation

Vol. 103

The bus tours being operated in conjunction with the Madoc and District Chamber of Commerce by Burrell Bateman will soon be discontinued if more people do not take advantage of the tours. "I don't see the sense in continuing the tours if the local people and the tourists in the area are not going to take advantage of them," Mr. Bateman told the Chamber of Commerce of Thursday night. "With the number of people presently taking advantage of the tours, it just isn't economically feasible to continue them."

Madoc Council debates motion to develop Whytock property

A rather heated discussion took place at the regular meeting of the Madoc Village Council on July 7th, 1980, over a motion passed by the council at the regular meeting it has a first position of the meeting in June. The motion causing the discussion stated that council request the Moira River Conservation Authority to turn over the Whytock property to the Village of Madoc for development purposes and that this motion be presented by a committee of council to the MRCA at their next regularly scheduled meeting. Council approved Councillors Connerty and Pigden to attend the meeting Councillor Pigden, who was absent from the June 2nd meeting when the motion was passed, was completely against the motion and asked council that it be rescinded. According to Reeve Deline, the motion was originally passed in the hopes that it would initiate development on the MRCA representative Tom Burnside had discussed the situation with Mr. Pigden and felt that the village was years away from being able to develop the years away from being able to develop the property. Councillor Pigden felt the motion did not say what the council intended the motion to mean, which would cast a reflection on the integrity of the council. He wanted to make it plain to the voters that he would not support the use of village funds for this purpose.

Other members of council continued to support the idea behind the motion, which was to see the Whytock property developed by someone, but the motion was existedly rescinded. Tourists and travellers down says store owner

In a report to the Chamber of Commerce on Thursday, July 17th, Mr. Ron Dittburner, the chairman of the Sidewalk Sale Committee for the Chamber of Sale Committee for the Chamber of Commerce, reported disappointment in the fumber of people who took advantage of the great bargains and many activities during the Heritage Week weekend. Havelock woman wins grocery basket

Winner of the draw for a $50 grocery basket sponsored by Hart's-Riggs' Wombasket sponsored by Hart's-Riggs' Women's Institute branch was Barbara Whalen of Havelock. The draw was held last Wednesday evening, July 16th, at the regular monthly meeting. The lucky ticket was drawn by Ivah Woods.

A slide presentation was given by Tourists down from other years

Continued from page 1 village this summer. Mr. Dittburner also commented that he feels there are not as many visitors from surrounding cities like to and that this tourist crunch has

The Sidewalk Sale was considered a limited success by Mr. Dittburner, in that it was the best sale in recent history and that many of the downtown retailers combined to give sales that satisfied the shoppers attending the function. However, shoppers attending the function. However, according to Mr. Dittburner, the costs for holding this year's Sidewalk Sale exceeded $700 and the total support of the downtown merchants will be required to cover those costs. "Virtually everyone benefits from having a day like that with so many events to draw people into the village. While we appreciate the support of those who have already contributed their $15.00, we still need the co-operation of the remainder of the business people to make this event a

And Mr. Dittburner felt that the trend of operation established this year would be vital to a bigger and better event next year. We had some excellent people involved this year, many of whom have already expressed a desire to increase their commitment next year. I think with a little more work next year, we can really make our Heritage Week celebrations a major attraction for this area."

These Bugs are Bruce Knapps' friends And they could be yours

One day Bruce Knapp went out into his garden to find his favorite black currant bush in obvious distress; its every leaf was drooping, it was a depressed and sick

"I didn't know what it was, but a close look soon revealed that it was simply crawling with aphids. It was almost completely covered with them." He called experts for advice but it was inadequate. Suggestions that the bush be hosed down to wash the aphids off would, he knew, fall short of the mark, there were simply too many aphids; and he had always been opposed to chemical insecticides and

A suggestion that he try bug control - in this case sicking a few hundred ladybugs on the aphids, since ladybugs are well-known bug eaters, sent him into

"When I couldn't find them "When I couldn't find them in Peterborough, I headed for Toronto and was back by that evening with a thousand refrigerated ladybugs; I hosed the bush down and then dumped the entire package on the bush just before dark (they have a tendency to fly when you first let themwarm, so it's best to do it at dusk). When I went out the next morning, there warn! went out the next morning, there wasn't one single aphid," he pauses and repeats with a salesman's emphasis, "not one single aphid on that whole bush."

single apint on that whole bush.

It was a happy ending for Mr. Knapp, for his black currant bush and for his ladybugs. It was a happy beginning too for Mr. Knapp as a salesman of non-chemical pest control.

"When I saw how well it worked, I asked Fossil Flower, the distributor, if they had anyone working in this area; when it turned out that the person here wan't doing it full time, I offered to take over. The response time. I ottered to take over. The response has been fantastic."

Basically Mr. Knapp deals in four products - ladybugs, praying mantis, trichogramma wasps and Fossi Flower, organic bug killer made up largely of Diatomaceous Earth.

To take the last first, Fossil Flower (which is rapidly becoming available in local hardware stores) is an organic bug killer made from diatomaceous earth, a substance made from specially refined, fossilized marine plants and used as a filtering agent in water systems as well. Basically these tiny diatems scratch the outer surface or exoskeletons of the bugs and it dehydrates and dies.

Ladybugs

Ladybugs and praying mantis eat bugs. The ladybugs can be bought at what appears to be reasonable prices compared to chemical insecticides ($6.00 per 1,000; that number should do the average garden that number should do the average gatuen for a year according to Mr. Knapp) and are as you might have gathered, shipped efrigerated (they can be refrigerated ducfinitely but freezing will kill them). An adult ladybug can eat 50 to 100 pests per Asa but is the eyes the ladybugs lay that adult ladybug can eat 50 to 100 pests per day but its the eggs the ladybugs lay that are really valuable. Once hatched the much nastier larvae, being a growing insect, eats about 50 pests an hour. According to Mr. Knapp they'll hang around as long as there are pests to eat: Larvae and eggs will hibernate all winter and start up again in the sorine. the spring.

Bruce Knapp with his "natural bug killer" display for Fossil Flower, a pesticide based on diatomaceous earth.

Praying Mantis

What a ladybug won't eat, apparently, a praying mantis will. The mantis are able to crack the harder shells that give ladybugs trouble. They are shipped in egg cases trouble. They are shipped in egg cases, claout 100 to 200 feoti to a ca'-) and you either attach the case to a plas with thread or can fact hit indoors.

Recording to Mr. Knapp, watching the mantis hatch is very interesting and he recommends putting them in a jar near a commends watch are a late of the commends and the commends and the commends are also become the commends.

window. "For one or two weeks, there'll be nothing, then all of a sudden, in a matter of minutes, you have hundreds of perfectly formed praying mantis." is, he notes, something that has to be done with care. You have to be there and get them out to Tou have to be there and get them out to the garden once they've hatched. Praying mantis' will cat anything, including each other, an I if you leave them too long you'll here only one -very large - mantis left.'
Mantis will set you back about $5.00 for three asses and like the other bugs, cost diminishes with the size of the order.

diminishes with the size of the order.

Trichogramma Wasp
The really macabre bug-killing technique belongs to the trichogramma wasp.
A tiny wasp that doesn't sting people.

according to its advance publicity, it lays its eggs in other bugs such as caterpillars. When the egg hatches, it feeds on the pest eating its way out from the inside. You get 4,000 of these lovely little darlings unhatched on a card; once they hatch you put them in the garden and let them carry out insecticide on all and sundry. The total cost to you, the accessory before the crime, is $4.00.

To Bruce Knapp. pardens, the appeal of

To Bruce Knapp, gardener, the appeal of these gory little bugs and the other "products" he sells are that they are organic.

'I won't use any chemicals in my garden. A lot of the pollution that we're having to deal with now is caused by the chemical fertilizers we use on the earth. having to deal with now is caused by the chemical fertilizers we use on the carth. And insecticides generally kill everything the beneficial as well as the harmful insects." (Only about one percent of all insects are considered destructive.) Another advantage of both diatomaceous the earth and the insects is that there is no way for the insects to build an immunity against many cartes. the predators - it is a mechanical rather than a chemical death."

than a chemical death."
"Another advantage is that we are dealing with something where we know the effects. After all these creatures have been with us before there was man." While Mr. Knapp, cautiously, won't say that it couldn't backfire with a sort of overpopulation of mantis and ladybugs, he thinks unlikely. "If they eat all the pests in your garden, they just go somewhere else and eat pests. They are controlled in turn naturally by birds that eat insects. I won't say there won't be ecological repercussions but I can't see where they'd come from. I but I can't see where they'd come from. I think this is much safer than dealing with chemicals that we don't know enough

Meanwhile Bruce Knapp salesman, is having the time of his life selling these cts whose time seems to have come. "I have people coming from all over to buy the bugs. Business couldn't be better."

Knapp himself must be one of the reasons the bugs are doing so well knowledgeable, enthusiastic, a born salesman, and experienced organic gardener, he has managed to whip up plenty of publicity for his product. ("I thought you of publicity for his product. ("I thought you might be interested in a man who sells bugs".) For Knapp being a bug salesman is the last in a long line of careers that includes the British Army, and a stint as a Beefeater at the Tower of London (he did a pecture tour of the area schools here several years ago when the beefeaters celebrated their 200th anniversary).

His status as an organic gardener who has dabbled successfully with other innovative techniques, including pyramids. can only help his credibility of course; and can only help his credibility of course; and people's growing concern for the health of the planet are drawing them to someone who shares their concern.

And how do the bugs feel about this? "I imagine it must be frustrating for the ladybugs, being refrigerated like that and then being taken out for long enough to have a few removed and being put back into the refrigerator again. Otherwise, I don't think they notice."

But the pests do.

six column format Cembal changing to

For some time now we at Cembal Publications have been considering a change in format, and, in particular, a change to a six column rather than a four column layout.

The impending newsprint shortage has forced our hand.

A six column format is the standard for column format is the standard for tabloid sized weekly newspapers

such as we produce out (tabloid is half the size of a broadsheet size such as the Toronto Star or most dailies). It is generally perceived that a six column format is more perceived that a six column formal is inci-attractive and easier to read; more importantly it is more conservative of space, with the same amount of copy and advertising the ove. all size of the papers is 20 per cent smaller.

And with a newsprint shortage - possibly even a situation where there is no newsprint for weeklies a reduction of that magnitude is very important.

So, before the end of August, the five newspapers that make up Cembal Publication - The Madoc Review, The Marmora Herald, The Havelock Citizen,

The Norwood Register and The Hassings Star - will be switching to a six column format. Accompanying this will also be changes in type style and size, also with the aim of providing a better-looking, easier-to-read newspaper.

We're looking forward to it; we hope you'll be pleased.

1) There are four benches, not two. 2)two - the ones in front of the bank and Cook's Barber Shop - were donated by the Young Adults Association, as we said. 3) But the two in front of the Marmora Insurance and the Gift Shoppe were placed there by the owners of those stores.

4) and all four were built by Gift Shoppe owner Doug Vilneff, not Bob Sanderson as was incorrectly stated last week.

MUSHROOMS

HOW TO TURN A QUICK BUCK...

AFTER FIRST TURNING AND TURNING AND TURNING.

BY JEANNETTE MOORE

a form of I've just learned about agriculture which gives a quick return on our invested money. In just five short your invested money. In just tive short weeks after planting your harvest and without additional planting you continue to pick at seven day intervals from the same seeding for three months before replants.

Now wouldn't you call that production? The product - mushrooms. But wait a minute. Don't rush out and buy up a mushroom farm until you hear what else is involved.

I visited a brand-new mushroom growing operation recently and learned about this fascinating branch of agriculture which produces one of our favourite foods : a top favourite judging by the numbers of buyers who are already seeking out the new grower for his produce.

About six miles north of Havelock Lorge.

es north of Havelock, Lorne About six miles north of Havelock, Lorne Wilbur has hacked a section out of a forested acreage he and his wife Willa purchased one year ago and he has erected three arched buildings 110° x 60° covered with black pliofilm. Inside are tiers of wooden beds on which compost and mushroom spawn are placed and the dark interior kept at a constant temperature. interior kept at a constant temperature.

When I drove up to the buildings no one was in view and so I walked to a door and looked through into the steamy darkness. Lorne Wilbur, having heard the car motor, came up quickly to catch me before I might decide to step inside, since, as he told me later, mushrooms are very susceptible to disease, and, like the animal world, are most susceptible to germs brought from another environment, becoming immune to the workers regularly around the site. As in the raising of poultry, strangers must walk through a germicide wash. It was only about 11 a.m. and not a hot

It was only about 11 a.m. and not a not day, but Lorne's face was red and beaded with perspiration and he looked as if he needed a break. "It's not that the buildings are so hot - they must be kept between 75 and 80 degrees Fahrenheit. It's the very high humidity in there. The compost is moist and must be kept damp" he said, wiping his brow.

At my suggestion that he stop working for a while and tell me about "the art and tor a while and tell me about the areas science of growing mushrooms", as it is referred to in one growers' pamphlet, he-quickly agreed and we sat down in his trailer home where he has lived for the past year while getting things under way, Willa still working as a secretary in Toronto and coming out Friday nights to visit her husband and help out.

"We pick every weekend," said Lorne. "We pick every weekend," said Lorne-flast weekend we started at 8 p.m. and finished at 3 o'clock in the morning. When all the sections are in service it will be longer. We should be picking about 800 rounds a week." pounds a week."

That's a lot of cotton-pickin' mushrooms for two people to pick. But that's still not the hard part even though you don't just pick mushrooms like strawberries. For pick mushrooms like strawberries. instance you have to pick them by portable instance you nave to pick them by portable light since continuous light promotes the growth of other pests. There is also a lot of know-how about gathering the plant. After a clump of mushrooms has been picked off, the remaining fleshy mushroom tissue is suffilled and the second light of the plant of th carefully removed from the soil and the hole filled with fresh soil - and in harvesting the large mushrooms many button mushrooms die off since many of button mushrooms die oft since many of the strands connecting the young buttons with the nutrients in the compost are broken. It takes practice, patience and knowledge to distinguish the damaged mushrooms from the healthy and remove to prevent decay. That know-how and the fact mushrooms must be watched in a 24-hour-a-day operation is one reason a lot 24-hour-a-day operation is one reason a lot of aspiring mushroom growers fall by the wayside. "There are so many diseases related to fungus and parasites which must be controlled and if you don't create the right medium and atmosphere you won't grow a mushroom" said Lorne.

But the really big reason not too many go into this quick-cash way of making a living into this quick-cash way or making a living is what it takes to prepare the compost, that is, unless you've got money to burn and can afford a mechanical compost pile turner. Listen to this, all you who want to turn a fast mushroom buck. To do so you have no first turn manually four times in 10 have to first turn manually four times in 10 days what starts out as 33 tons of compost mix and in reases in weight each turning because of added water. That means turning over by pitchfork over 132 tons of horse manure and wet hay in 10 days. They sure got it a lot easier down on the

"Every grower has his own recipe for compost according to what he thinks works best. I use hayamd fresh horse manure which I purchase locally" said Lorne. "May mixture creates compost in 10 days". After a lot of shovelling, that is.

Even after all that turning you are not through lifting the stuff. It must be forked into a pasteurizer and heated to a maximum of 145 degrees Fahrenheit or 120 maximum of 143 degrees rantenness of 120 deg. Fahrenheit minimum before being lifted again onto the beds. And that's why Lorne has a beautiful dream which he foresees coming into reality in five years' time. Now 33 years of age he anticipates sticking at this physical endurance test until he's 38 then changing over his buildings from a mushroom factory to an orchid garden. "I can't see why they won't grow in the same environment. Orchids are also parasites which grow in the dark."

His imaginative plan was dreamed up by Lorne himself, probably as a result of nine years he spent in the West Indies, where exotic flowers abound, as an accountant with a development company.

But for the present it's mushrooms and soon, worms also, since the exhausted compost still has nutrients in it and can be used for worm food.

There is a market for the spent compost but not remunerative enough to pay for bagging the stuff and so I intend to turn sections into worm-raising. The worms will consume the compost as well as produce worms which will produce castings which in turn are also a marketable

Now, if one can stand the heat and hard work, how does one grow mushrooms?

"First you place compost in the beds and level them. Then you seed with a laboratory-prepared rye grain inoculated with mushroom spore. I get mine from the most your property of the most young to so white company. I then do with mushroom spore. I get mine from the only Toronto spawning company. I then do a saturation spawning (some people spor. I saturate) throughout the bed. Seven days later you can see the cottony web of mushroom spawn running through the bed which like a root system. When fully mushroom spawn running through the bed much like a root system. When fully established you 'case' it with alt to 1/2 inches of peat moss sterilized and wet. Fourteen to 21 days later you have mushrooms, Every 7 to 10 days you pick off. There is a rest period of 7 days then more picking for a period of three months. Then you dump everything, fumigate and start from scratch. I am running two sections at a time. I'll dump at the end of 24-hour-a-day operation and "if you don't create the right medium and atmosphere you won't grow a mushroom," says Lorne.

Do I detect a break in that solid wall of po 1 octect a break in that solid wall of opposition to a marketing board in the ranks of the beef producers?

Are there really some rebels in one of the most important segments of Canada's agricultural sector?

A count

A couple of years ago, I was asked to speak at a county beef producer's annual meeting. As usual, my big mouth got me into trouble. I have always been a proponent of farm marketing boards and I suggested in my talk that the beef boys should look into the idea.

When I finished talking, the atmosphere in the room was deadly. Farmers, being the gentlemen they usually are, did not insult me or throw manure at me or anything as drastic as that. They thanked my speaker's fee.

Beef producers have been vehemently opposed to marketing boards. They are fiercely independent and want to remain that way.

But some mavericks are now having some doubts if I am reading the signs correctly. At least four county associations are now suggesting that the executive of the Ontario Cartlemen's Association consider a marketing plan of some kind. But the idea could be stopped until the annual meeting next February.

Gramme Hedding

annual meeting next February.

Graeme Hedley, manager of the provincial association, says a clause in the association is constitution prevents directors from making such a decision without consent of voting delegates.

The rebels are only asking for a study. Portly Eugene Whelan, the nation's agminister, has advocated a marketing plan for beef. True to his democratic principles, he has always told farmers to clean up their own yard before dumping manure in the government's yard. "Tell us what you want," he keeps saying, "and we'll give you the authority to do it."

The unrest comes in the face of, low prices for beef. Producers have waited five prices for beef. Producers have waited five years for prices to go up. Now that hog prices are down drastically, they felt beef prices would climb, especially when all the experts predicted great shortages of bed, But the old law of supply and demand has been broken somewhere along the line. Beef prices to producers have not risen with expectations. Bediegenery expectations. Replacement prices remain high.

And production costs keep escalating. Cattlemen, if you'll pardon the express-ion, should be in clover, just like their

But they aren't.

To make matters worse, fewer feeder cattle may reach Ontario feedlots if a proposed Saskatchewan income stabilizproposed Saskatchewan income stabiliza-ation plan for cow-calf men is approved which would give producers a cost-of-pro-duction guarantee. But the guarantee comes only if the cattle remain under the same ownership until slaughter. Which would mean fewer feeder cattle shipped to Ontario feedlots, It all adds up to problems for beef producers in Ontario. Dan Pone, president of the Wentworth

Dan Pope, president of the Wentworth Cattlemen's Association, has pooh-poohed the free enterprise stand taken by most cattlemen.

"How can you be a free enterpriser when everyone else in the country is organized?" he asks. Good question.

How can individuals compete against huge corporations that control everything from the farm gate for the dinner table? Half a dozen super food chains in this country control 90 per cent of the food sold. They counted the processing the superscript. How can individuals compete against They control the processing, packaging, shipping, wholesaling and retailing. They shipping, wholesaling and retailing. They sometimes do it in a questionable way if we can believe the evidence in the recent inquiry into discounts and kickbacks. It will be interesting to note what happens in this recent rebellion, if it gets off the ground. I have a hunch the bureau-crats within the provincial and federal cattlemens associations will do everything cattlemens associations will do everything in their power to squelch the thought of a marketing board for beef.

Speaking of cattlemen, the agricultural community lost a wonderful person this spring with the death from cancer of Harvey Davis of Dobbinson, the beef king of the Bruce Peninsula. His ready smile and engaging manner, as well as his progressive thinking will be missed.

"I can't get over how beautiful it is here," said Don Peddie, "the country is here," said Don Peddie, "the country is just fantastic."

Mr. Peddie is the group leader in charge of the junior conservationists who are doing an inventory of Callaghan's Rapids. As such he is one of the very few people who have travelled throughout the park, and seen all the wonders it has to offer. Callaghan's Rapids is not remote in the sense of distance, its only a few miles from Marmora, but it is a little off the beaten track. Its on the Crowe River on the Rawdon-Marmora line but there is no way into it from Highway 14 on the east. On the west by going down the Tiffin Road south from seven and then turning left and following to the end you can drive to within a few hundred yards of the rapids.

The rapids themselves are a long stretch where the river yidens and flows shallowle over the limestone bed. It's a unique and beautiful place, it's teaming with waterlife, plantife and wildlife; it's rare that there's on much to be seen all so close together.

The river is difficult to wade across - the The river is difficult to wade across - the bottom is sharp and the current is strong enough to throw you off balance, but it's not really dangerous for an adult. And crossing the river somehow (you can walk across the CPR line, which is not far up) is really necessary to see the most fascinating really necessary to see the most instantance and to the area.

In the spring the river is high enough to divide into two parts and form a large island in the centre; the rest of the year the eastern course is dry. This dry riverbed reveals great caves, tunnels and trough that the water has worked through the soft stone. It too, is uniquely interesting and uniquely attractive.

The junior Conservationists are making an inventory of Callaghan's rapids this summer and will be suggesting to the Crowe Valley Conservation Authority how Crowe Valley Conservation Authority how they can open this fascinating area up. Hopefully, in a year or two, these wonders will be more accessible to the public. Right now, they're accessible to the more

EDITOR'S. VIEWPOINT BY IEANNETTE MOORE Country life

The old saying "Familiarity breeds contempt" may be trite but it's certainly true. We, who are fortunate enough to be true. We, who are fortunate enough to be able to live, in resort country don't appreciate our good luck.

Oh I can hear some protest voices in the background saying: "I appreciate it. I love the country", but even those who enjoy the opportunity to fish and swim and breather the fresh air every day of the week are prone to take it all for granted. And all to often I hear someone give a sigh for "all those things to do in the city".

We should banish all such people back to the city and take away their weekend passes.

think we would all spend each day more enjoyably and savor each moment, if; upon waking up we repeated ten times "I'm lucky to live in this beautiful resort country". I think we would all spend each day more country."

For those of us who have spent most of our lives in the city, it would be a good idea to hold a remembrance day regularly just to hold a remembrance day regularly Just as we do a war remembrance day, so as to appreciate our present freedom - freedom from carbon monoxide gas and the dark cloud of every other kind of gaseous obscenity that hangs over a big city, freedom from all those lost hours spent going to and from work (that is, unless you are one living in the country driving miles and miles to work in the city), freedom from the rush; freedom from the anonymity from the rush; freedom from the anonymity and not knowing who one's next door neighbour is. (I can hear some of you again sniggering over that one. But there is an enjoyable community spirit in the country missing from the big city.) For mysell; the top treedom is from all those wasted hours of travel. To be able to those wasted hours of travel. To be able to spend a day at work and drive home our uncrowded roads. Well I recall night after night after a good day's work standing pressed on both sides by a pack of strange bodies and hanging on the overhead bar of the subway or bus enduring an hour or more of transportation away from the downtown - and the dark nights in wither when the buses were brought to a standstill and the long lines of commuters' stood in zero temperature along with me, uncomand the long lines of commuters stood in zero temperature along with me, uncom-plaining and uncommunicative in the cold. Yes, as I drive along now over roads where I rarely meet a car I look about at the woods and rivers and enjoy what most city people work all week to be able to visit for the work all week to be able to visit for in-weekend.

Is there nothing I miss about the city?
Yes, one thing. It's that wonderful feeling on Friday night when the weekend looms ahead and I can be off to the country. What joy to be able to look forward to spending two days luxuriating near or in a lake....Yes I miss that feeling just as one would miss hitting oneself on the head with a hammer because if feels so good when one stops

Come to think of it. Better than a remembrance day would be a "Feeling Sorry for City Folks Day".

Insect eating plants

Insects that eat plants are commonplace in every forest or garden, but plants that eat in sects are one of the strangest twists of nature. Insectivorous plants sound like they belong in some tropical exotic forest, but in fact we have several different kinds right here in Ontario.

Probably the best-known is the pitcher Probably the best-known is the pitcher plant, whose rosettes of cup-shaped leaves grace many bogs. Rainfall trapped in these leaves mixes with enzymes secreted by the plants, so that insects or other small animals drowned in the liquid are easily digested. Their drowning is helped by a dignery lip on the cun, and dense rows of slippery lip on the cup, and dense rows of downward-pointing hairs inside to prevent

The sundews are another family of The sundews are another lating of insect-eaters common to wetland areas such as the Federation of Ontario Naturalists' Petrol Point sanctuary. These minute plants, with three species identified by the shape of the leaf, are covered with oy the snape of the leaf, are covered with hairy bristles, each with a droplet of sticky fluid. When an insect lands on these glistening drops, it is mired in achesive, and then enveloped in tentacles for digestion over the next several days. These digestion over the next several days. Inese deceptively pretty sundews are found in various forms around the world, including a Portuguese variety five feel tall which is collected by local villagers as natural flypaper for their homes.

Most insectivorous plants are marked by two distinctive features. First, their leave usually have reddish veins as markings, to help attract insects to their death. Second, insect-eaters occur in nutrient-poor areas, such as bogs, where the extra nitrogen provided by the insects is needed for their growth and survival. The famous scientist Charles Darwin was the first to show the importance of this carnivorous diet, since the sundews he fed artificially produced more vigorous growth and more flowers and seed than those kept from insects.

Insectivorous plants can be remarkably efficient fly-catchers, but their specialized habitat is uncommon in Ontario. They won't grow in your backyard so there's little hope you could use sundews for mosquito control in your neighbourhood. Federation of Ontario Naturalists

Mushrooms are one of the few things that taste good that are low in calories and also good for you. According to the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture they contain much less protein than meat and fish but compare favourably with most fresh vegetables in protein content and are a good source of vitamins and minerals such as iron and copper. They are also an excellent plant source of riboflavin and incotinic acid and a good source of pantothenic acid. They also contain appreciable amount of thiamin and biotin. These vitamins are well retained during cooking and in canned, dehydrated, and frozen mushrooms.

would demonstrate with the aid of a smail boy, who was usually as tired as the horse, and who did the modelling for Mr. Rivkin. Sometimes, of course, the garments were on the large side for the poor little guy, which didn't seem to offend brother Rivkin at all, and he'd have the wretcher little kid, waver around there modelling a coat and pants about five sizes too big for him just so my mother could get an idea of coat and pants about five sizes too big for him, just so my mother could get an idea of what they looked like on a kid twice as big as this one. The little chap used to stand there like a scarecrow at a christening one minute, and then he would be squeezed into a suit several times too small, so that for someope to squeeze him out of it.

My Auntie Marjorie had a pointed beak where her nose was supposed to be, that where her nose was supposed to be, that was 'permanently pointed to the highest heavens as though to shuffle away from some underlying odour. She was an interferer to a magnificent competence, and as she is still alive and kicking today I and as she is still alive and Ricking Goday I am sure that the degree of her involvement in the affairs of those around her will be just as comprehensive, if not more so as a result of old age and continuing experience

But on this particular occasion my Auntie Marjorie was shocked and debilitated to the very nucleus of her genre swaying in the autumn zephyr, before the enchanted view of the immediate neighbours, which might seem a little bizarre in this day and age when all the shapely young women, (and my mother was one of them at the time) almost wear the briefest of bikinis that leave practically zero to the imagination.

The first Ontario Dairy Congress may become a reality in May 1981.

"A small group of dairy producers, agribusiness representatives and Ministry of Agriculture and Food staff have already explored the potential of such an event." says Don Taylor of the Ministry's live stock branch. "We've received support from the Ontario Milk Marketing Board, breed associations and agribusiness."

Although preliminary meetings have been held, the congress program has not been established. Producers are invited to contribute their ideas and assistance on the congress committees.

"We're asking all interested dairy producers to come out and talk about the producers to come out and talk about the program at an open meeting July 10, at 8 p.m. at the Stratford Fairgrounds marker anex." Savs Mr. Taylor. "We have been talking about a three-day program that would include commercial exhibits, a high caliber educational program for producers, and educational program for producers, and livestock shows for all of the dairy breeds." says Mr. Taylor.

The concept of an Ontario Dairy Congress has the support of the industry in principle. What it needs now is volunteers principle. What it needs now is volunters to make it work, Mr. Taylor says. For more information about the meeting, contact Jack Rodenburg at the Minstry's office in Woodstock, (519) 537-6621.

Pullet's Jamboree m : E []

The rain held off just long enough over the weekend to allow almost perfect weather for Madoc's Second Annual MHM Country Music and Puller's Jamboree. Tractors began arriving in Madoc early Saturday morning as they prepared for the pull in the afternoon and registered in the various classes. Cloudy skies threatened for the pull in the afternoon was the same than the same to the same than the wash out the events but, when all was said and done, the events but, when all was said and done, the rain did not come down until the pulling events were concluded for the day. The remainder of events were held indoors, so the rain did no appreciable

The tractor pulls were everything that the organizers had hoped for and more. Contestants from all around the country Contestants from all around the country took part and, boding well for the future of the Madoc event, contestants appeared from some of the more established events from asound the province. The locals brought out their own particular makes of tractors to try to prove to their neighbours that they had a better tractor. Tractors that do virtually nothing but travel to these types of meets were also in attendance and they were the ones that really added the excitement to the event, although the crowd did enjoy the confrontations etween neighbours.
However, when the results were fit

However, when the results were finally in, it appeared that the locals from Madoc and the surrounding area had, done pretty well. In the 6000 pounds and under category, Doug Hookstrow from Quinte Farms had placed first with Larry Palmateer and Bob Curtis placing second and third respectively. In the 6001-7000 pound class, Mr. Hookstow again placed first with Tim Palmateer and Don Langevin processing the property of the propert placing second and third. In the 7001-9000 pound class. Doug Hookstrow again walked away with the prize while Ken Preston, and Steve Grover placed second walked away with the prize while Ken Preston, and Steve Grover placed second and third. In the 9001-10,000 pound class, somebody finally beat Doug Hookstrow Larry Palmateer took first place. Doug McCoy took second and John Palmateer praced third. Doug Hookstrow was a close fourth. In the 11,000 and up category, Lorie Pierce placed first with two pulls of 275 feet plus while George Palmateer could only manage a pull of 264 the second time. Larry Palmateer placed third.

It was quite obvious once the competition began, that some of these mpetitors had returned to avenge competitors had returned to avenge defeats last year. We are certain that some of those feelings will carry over into next year's competition and again make this an event worth watching.

Following the tractor pulls, a talent show and dance took place in the Madoc and District Recreation Centre and, following the trend throughout the day, large crowds showed up to enjoy the evening. Every showed up to enjoy the evening. Every organizer had a smile on his face on Saturday as he saw the crowd continue to pour onto the grounds throughout the afternoon and evening. The weather was nearly ideal and the competitors put on a show that the spectators could not help but

On Sunday morning, the firemen were up bright and early to prepare a good, old-fashioned firemen's breakfast for the spectators who would be watching the truck pulls later in the day. By 10 a.m., the trucks had begun to arrive and the tension began to build to see who had brought the

began to build to see who had brought the best truck. Unfortunately, as the competition proved later, just having the best truck was not enough. You also needed a considerable amount of luck.

When the pulls finally got underway, fourwheel drive trucks of every make and description were trying for the top spot, One truck that impressed everyone and that always seemed to get off to a good start, had one long day of bad luck and, after tearing down the track at a what looked like a record-breaking pace, something always seemed to ge wong and something always seemed to go wrong and the truck would stall. You can bet he'll be back next year to prove that he could have done better if his vehicle had co-operated.

This, however, was not to be a good day This, however, was not to be a good day for the local contestants. The Ottawa club brought a very strong team and, it was soon apparent, they were going to be the ones to beat. In the 5000 pound class, competing for the Tom Deline trophy. John Palmateer edged Jim Coco B Brighton by ten feet for first spot while Mike McGuire placed third. Tom Dunfield, Dave Dunfield and Graham Carmichael tied for first place the first rull with over 275 feet each. In on the first pull with over 275 feet each. However, Loraine Dunfield was narrowly edged out for second spot as Charlie Hynes pulled the sled six inches farther. The Ottawa Valley Offroaders brought a trophy with them and created a brought a trophy with them and created a new category. For this over 7000 pound class, you guessed it, the Ottawa Valley boys (and girls) took first, second and third. Tom Dunfield again placed first, Loraine Dunfield placed second and Ray Villeneuve placed third. The organizers would like to thank all of those who participated in this year's event for making it so successful and give a standing invitation to return next year. They would also like to thank Russell's Allis-Chalmers dealership, Bailey's Deutz dealership, Hadley's Massey-Ferguson dealership, Sommer's Polaris dealership and Putman's Ford dealership for the trophies they donated to the winners.

While the truck pull was taking place in the afternoon, Stickwood's Dry Goods Store also staged a fashion show for the women who were not interested in the pulls and, as advertized, there was something shown for every age group, from children to adults. The show was a resounding success and will certainly be included in next year's program.

The horseshoe throwing contest also drew a large crowd as many of the best "pitchers" in the area competed for Everyone agreed after the weekend that the events held this year were again a major success and well organized. From the judges to the contestants, each and everyone wanted to be invited back next year. One of the out-of-town judges commented, "You couldn't have gotten Continued on page 7

American tourists staying away in droves?

BY PATRICK REDICAN

The Centre Hastings area, because of its stance from the American border, has suffered a sharp decline in its American tourist trade in spite of the fact that the province as a whole is doing better tourist business.

drawn from a quick survey of local business people and tourism officials by the Marmora Herald and Madoc Review last largest tourist facilities in the Centre Hastings area, was most straightforward. "Tourist traffic is down. There's no doubt about that. And the main reason is because there are hardly any Americans up."

Mrs. Harris said that the cost of gas combined with the American drive to keep people at home ("see America first") in order to fuel its own tourist economy have combined to fuel this phenomena and it has resulted in, over all, a slower summer so "Across the board it's been an extremely good year. We predicted a drop of three percent in border crossings because of the gas shortage and the fact that it's an gas shortage and the fact that it's an election year, but it's actually an incredible, staggering fifteen percent. "Part of that fifteen percent, Mr. Potter confessed represented people simply coming over to buy cheaper gas. ("But we don't really mind that because surveys and that the confessed represented that the season of the season that they spend money elsewhere reflected in this area. "In Peterborough the only figures I really have to go by are occupancy. And we're five to ten percent up here - which is very good. Normally the overflow would mean that the rural areas would be doing as well.

Also surprised was Aldo Campagnola, the Manager of the Central Ontario Travel

Also surprised was Aldo Campagnola, the Manager of the Central Ontario Travel Association which is responsible for promoting tourism in this area. "I've only had one complaint. I do know that people aren't travelling as far, that they're staying closer to home. We haven't had time to do a count yet, but as I say very few resort operators are complaining."
What might be the reasons why this area at might be the reasons why this area What might be the reasons why this area might be suffering more than most? Well, as everyone pointed out, people are travelling shorter distances. Eastern Ontario is fairly underpopulated and this area has always relied on southwestern Ontario and the burder area as much or when the contrains and the burder areas as much or when the contrains and the burder areas as much or when the contrains and the burder areas as much or when the contrains and the burder areas as much or when the contrains and the burder areas as much or when the contrains and the burder areas as much or when the contrains a superior when the contrains a supe Ontario and the border states as much or more than Oshawa, Peterborough, Belle-more than Oshawa, Peterborough, Belleville, Trenton, Kingston and Ottawa.

But a couple of other possibilities also come up. We don't have the promotion dollars that other areas have. As Mr. Campagnola put it, "We don't have the dollars to put in marketing. Toronto's promotion budget is in the hundreds of thousands. We have to nush a fairly large thousands. We have to push a fairly large thousands. We have to push a fairly large area and we have only $50,000,"

Mr. Potter thought that the villages should have a close look at what they have to offer. "Almost half of the money spent by a tourist is spent on food and accomodation. If an area lacks good places to eat or places to stay, it's fighting at uphill battle right from the beginning. It also depends on how hard you go out to get the business. The smart places get the courist dollar with welcome American days tourist dollar with welcome American days and other promotions."

What prompted the survey was obvious most (not all) businessmen and residents have noticed a certain flatness if not a falling in trade this summer over last. And almost everyone, without exception, can tell you that, if they had a nickle for every American licence plate that's popped up this supper, they'd still have to work for a far for them at the camp.

And it's not only American tourists who are not turning out. "as long as they have to travel over top of Toronto (about a one hour drive) people are less likely to come. Our business from Toronto and west of Toronto is down. Our business from Sohawa and the area east of Toronto is about the same. People are very conscious of cost. They tell us, "it costs $30 to. drive here every weekend". They're very careful."

This has lead too, to less business in the

This has lead too, to less business in the camp store. "People are just watching their money more carefully."

According to Mrs. Harris, though, there have been compensating factors. "Because people aren't travelling as far, people who come from Belleville and Trentoniand was to spend their summers farther north are now staying with us because it's that much chaper. And we're seeing more people taking a trailer spot for the whole summer and travelling back and forth to it on weekends because that's cheaper."

She also said that the unpredictable and unusually wet, weather in the first half of July also affected their business, but that it wasn't a significant factor. have been compensating factors. "Because wasn't a significant ractor.

Interestingly enough Mrs. Harris' observations and opinions - which tallied with a number of other people I talked to in the past week or so - are not borne out by the official statistics or reports. Ontario Ministry of Industry and Tourism figures Ministry of Industry and Tourism figures indicate significant jumps in tourism for the province as a whole and even for nearby Peterborough. While that doesn't contradict local observations - there are no figures for these small places - it might indicate we're in an anomalous position. Bruce M. Potter, the Tourism Industry and Tourism for the Ministry of Industry and Tourism for this area, couldn't have been note oleased with the tourism situation.

when they're here"). "But even without when they're here"). "But even without those crossings statistics show that people staying longer than two days are up 10 percent. For an election year (apparently during American presidential elections Americans stay home to keep an eye on each other) that's extremely good."

He said that overseas visitors particularly Japanese and Germans are up considerably as well. The dollar difference and increasing affluence it these countries is helping attract them.

"We were preciting an increase of 36 percent. We've reached that at least. I expect we're doing much better." And, he said, in province travel is also up.

Mr. Potter was surprised that it wasn't

"And people have to realize that tourism is changing. European and Japanese tourists are becoming a larger and larger part of the business. Yet I had a place turn down a booking for a group of Japanese. We can't afford that kind of thinking. The Japanese are ideal tourists Whatever the reasons, it's left many

Whatever the reasons, it's left many local operators hoping that it was an isolated phenomena. "The first two weeks of July were dead." Mrs. Harris said. "The end of July and the beginning of August are always busy, so we just have to hope that the last two weeks of August are good. We only really have an eight week season, we can't afford too many slow weeks."

The Pullers' Jamboree held in Madoo The Pullers Jamboree held in Madoc this weekend was a success because of a variety of things. The weather was almost ideal, with rain holding off until the events were finished each day. The help and co-operation of a great deal of people combined to make the job that much less hard for all concerned. The quality of contestants in every event was mucontestants in every event was much improved over last year, resulting in one event having a draw off between three contestants. And the organization was very good, resulting in everyone asking when the next pull would be. Sorry fellows, you've got to wait until next year.

Ted Sexsmith, the chairman of the committee, was very pleased with the spectators and the contestants. "The tractor contestants had increased by 50 percent this year, the trucks were up slightly in numbers buli-we had a better batch of contestants and the crowd was a very pleasant surprise. Next year, the people in this area can expect to see modified tractors as well as ten wheel transport tractors competing in our pull. We're going to try and make this pull bigger and better each year."

The organizers would also like to thank Sam Danford for his help and equipment throughout the weekend, as well as the men who worked on the gate during the two-day event. "All of this help combined to make this weekend a very successful one for the Fairboard and the Firemen," said Mr. Ken Yarrow, "and we really appreciate the support."

CLEARING THE AIRWAYS

This falcon is saving the airplanes from the seagulls

Well the Base Flight Safety Officer of CFB Trenton, has come up with a new twist. He is fighting birds with birds. If you have ever been involved with military aircraft for any length of time, you will know that one of the major problems they face is avoiding birds while they are on their missions. (If you haven't been around military aircraft, you may never have seen a bird strike and you may be asking, "What damage can a bird do to an airplane but with today's airplanes flying at very high speeds, birds can do considerable damage to an airplane).

at very high speeds, birds can do considerable damage to an airplane). Most military and civilian airports have been trying to solve this problem for years. CFB Trenton has been no exception, but they may finally have found the answer. It meant importing some birds from the west, but it cut their incidence of bird strikes last year by 83 percent and it is expected to be higher this year.

Swallows are the birds that cause most of owninws are the orios that cause most of the problems on a military or civilian airport. In Trenton, however, the major problem was seagulls with swallows running a close second. For years, the military personnel at CFB Trenton have military personnel at CFB Trenton have been trying to frighten these pests away. Various methods were used. They tried shooting the birds and using crackers that would make a very loud bang, but the gulls just keep/coming back. Chemical warfare also failed. Chemicals were sprayed on the ground to kill the worms these birds feed on. When that failed, these birds feed on. When that raised, chemically treated pieces of bread were fed to the gulls. The chemical on the bread would affect the gull's nervous system and force them to emit their alarm signal. All of the other birds would hear that alarm and head for other climes. But birds are not have been seen featured out this. stupid and they had soon figured out this little trick.

So, having tried the modern methods of bird control, the military decided to try a much more traditional method. They hired much more traditional method. They hired a falconer to patrol their airstrip and surrounding localities. At CFB Trenton, their problem is multiplied by the fact that they have a municipal dump just about two miles from the end of their runway. Birds were attracted to this site by the thousands, forcing their aircraft to fly through them or around them. The falconer and his falcon have changed that situation. Peter Serwylo handles the falcons at CFB Trenton and this new program has are virtually no seagulls in the area and he directly attributes that to Miss Piggy, a gyr falcon. Although it sounds simple it's not; you have to suit the falcon to your needs or, you have to get the right type of falcon to control the variety of bird that is causing your problem.

The Gyr Falcon is the largest variety of The Gyr Falcon is the largest variety of falcon in the world and its natural habitant is the rough. Arctic wastelands. It feeds naturally on gulls. Miss Piggy is on loan to CFB Trenton and Peter Serwylo from an Alberta breeding facility at Wainwright. They are in their second year at CFB Trenton. Falconry was a hobby for Peter for twelve years and he gave up foreman's position at another job when he awarded the contract at Trenton. "I like working with falcons and I like wo Peter feels that a falcon can be trained within three weeks. "It's best to have only one handler for the bird and, during the one handler for the bird and, during the three week training period, you have to work the bird three or four hours per day. You start training the bird by getting livte cat from your gloved hand. Then, you train the bird to eat from the lure, which is a leather pouch with gull wings attached it. The third and final siep is to let the bird by free and yet set it to return to the

While Peter feels that this method of controlling the birds is by far the most humane, he also adds, "Don't get the impression that everytime we send the falcon up, it makes a kill. Even in the wild, a gyr falcon will only make one kill in ten flights. It's just the fact that it is up there that keeps the gulls away, although it will make a kill if it gets the chance. If it makes kill if, texts the bird. One thing you the kill, it gets the bird. One thing you must remember when handling a falcon is that it must be rewarded when it does what that it must be rewarded when it does what you want and it can't be punished when it does something wrong. If you punish the bird or mistreat it, it won't forget and the first time you try free flight, you could be a falconer without a falcon."

Municipal government and development

since I came to this area late last fall i re found myself repeatedly sympathiz-with the plight of the developers; the opple who are proposing residential and numercial projects of all sorts.

This is an odd position for me to be in;

If you want to build a few cottages or a w houses you are automatically faced th municipal governments, planning hards, health units, the Ministry of ousing, and the Ministry of Environment, of which pet their names in your of which get their noses in your distant firm of consultants. Municipal consultants are an entirely new industry brought on by the complexity of development under the present circumstances and just about every municipal government is wholly or partially dependent upon these firms. The problem with them is they are not local; they make judgments from afar and they can make mistakes like the rest of us. The developer then ends up paying twice

The developer then ends up paying twice for the same advice because he will have to for the same advice because he will have to hire his own consultants to prepare his plan to suit local regulations. Then the local government makes him pay for its consultants. So the developer is paying for both sets of advice. However this only becomes a major problem if the two consultancy firms give contradictory advice. Then the developer is in the ironic position of paying for the road blocks.

This won't continue forever though, executally those with money and ideas are eventually those with money and ideas are going to look for better pastures with less expensive systems. They will leave our area and not create employment or

The problems for developers often stem from a municipality's not wanting a particular development in the first place but instead of saying. "Listen we don't need or want this thing." they will create a bureaucracy can stall plans for years and ear up time and money. The province can have three or more ministries involved in approving projects. Sometimes they can make contradictory demands.

Basically, what I am complaining about is too much bureaucracy and too little intelligence and almost no co-operation all of which is going to have to change if this area is going to face the challenges of the eighties. the eighties.

I don't propose we even consider going back to giving the developers a free hand. They have already proved to my satisfaction that they aren't to be trusted with the responsibility. And you could probably say the same for each of the levels of governments involved.

No, what I think we need is more openness to start with and a lot more o-operation. To start off, each municishould have the courage and the legal authority to tell a potential developer,
"No we don't want this in our community" if that's the way they feel but they should not be able to stonewall projects for years without making a formal declaration.

The municipalities should also have clearly defined position on development so that the developer can approach the council with a previous understanding of what is possible and what is not possible, so that time and money aren't wasted on obviously unacceptable plans.

Once the municipality and the developer reach an agreement in principal they should go to a consultant to advise them both on how their respective goals can be reached through altering the plan, rather than each hiring consultants to play an adversarial role. The adversary notion only eats up untold amounts of time and money which could be better spent

The province too should get its act together. Surely, the development functions of the three or four ministries tions of the three or load limited involved could be brought together either through re-organization or improved co-operation. The objective of this action should be to reduce the time and cost for approving projects.*

Also the province should make all its regulations clear and straightforward, then act in a more consultive fashion - that is making suggestions as to how things sould making suggestions as to how timing suggestions as be accomplished during the planning stages instead of demanding costly changes after the plans are completed.

In order for this kind of planning to work, openness will be the key factor. If the developer is open and honest with the municipality and the municipality is open in return, then we will know what's going on and all the regulations can be met and get on with creating the jobs we need without surrendering control of our spend at least one full day on the property, it is virtually impossible to see everything. The Mill is located just about two or three miles northwest of Madoc with signs directing you to the site from both Highways 7 and 62. For those who like to see things the way the way the see the seed to be the seed Highways 7 and 52. For those who like to see things the way they used to be, O'Hara's Mill is ideal. Besides the beautiful location, you can see an old dam with a Muley type sawmill in operation on with a Muley type sawmin in operation of Sundays. The sawmill makes every MRCA official swell with pride and it takes very little coaxing to make them talk about this mill. Tom Burnside, our local official, exhibited that pride while talking to me as he stated that he thought it was one of only two in operating condition in the province.

After crossing the dam, and seeing the mill, you have two choices: you can continue on to the nature trails, which continue on to the nature trails, which provide a very scenic and relaxing walk, or you can veer to the right and visit the old school house from Flinton, the blacksmith shop, the O'Hara House and Museum, a shed containing many early farm implements and machinery and also another drive shed with many handtools used by the early pioneers of the area. You are well advised to allow yourself a goodly length of time to visit this area. Those who go through quickly will be disappointed that they did not have a longer time to see the they did not have a longer time to see the many and varied artifacts which make up the many displays in the different buildings

If you decide to visit O'Hara's Mill, allow If you decide to visit O that a 3 min, allow yourself the whole day. relocation of a church to the area. We will likely continue the addition of artifacts to the various displays, but again, we're having trouble with the cataloguing and storing of the artifacts."

Last year, Clayton Smith of. Madoc solved a problem that has been bugging ithe authority for years. Do what they might, they could not completely stop the dam from leaking. Mr. Smith overhauled the dam and, for the first time in years, no water was escaping other than that which the authority released to run the mill and the spill. However, last spring's flooding proved that the dam was not just another pretty face. This dam held back bugs amounts of ice and water even as water was running over the dam. Without this help from the dam, there could have been serious damage farther downstream. Damage was done to many houses and businesses within the village of Madoc, but they would have been stopped by the O'Hara Mill, dam.

Peat as fuel

Most of us think of peat moss only as a il conditioner of our gardens. Now the gry experts are taking a second look at the of its ancient uses - as a source of fuel heat or electricity both uses are based in the creations from a special kind. of ving soil.

Peat is extracted from bogs, which are pecial wetlands usually formed in small epressions or lakes. Bog vegetation that at the edge of such a lake and radually extends across the surface of the later, forming a floating mat. If you walk cross a "quaking bog" at this stage, you might think your legs are rubber, for the mat trembles and bounces with every step. Over the centuries, dead plant materials form an organic layer on the lake bottom and attached to the mat. Pecause this layer it kept (onsamble west it cannot be reached norm an organic tayer on the take bottom and attached to the mat. Peccause this layer is kept constantly wet, it cannot be reached by oxygen, and its rate of decomposition is very slow. A thick 'mattress of peat is eventually formed, to be changed only if drier conditions prevail and decay begins.

A bog is a living thistory lesson, for the climate of centuries past is reflected in its peat. Bright-coloured layers, rich in the remains of water plants, indicate a period flooding and a cool wer climate. Dark, decomposed peat shows few plant remains, since warmer drier summers during its formation allowed oxidation and decay. Apother historical indicator locked in the layers of peat is preserved-pollen, which can be examined to identify the kind of vegetation growing on a site thousands of vegetation growing on a site thousands of

With all its accumulation of organic matter, you would think a bog should be rich in nutrients. But those nutrients are locked up in the peat, leading to the recation of typically acid environment with specialized vegetation. While pond bogs are relatively rare in southern Ontario, their vegetation is much more characterjistic of the north: black spruce, tamarack/Labrador tea, orchids and insectivorous plants. This northern flavour does much to add interest to our southern wetlands.

Peter also admits there are problems with handling a bird like Miss Piggy. (The female of the species is almost invariably used for hunting because they are naturally one third larger than the male.) Right now, the temperature is almost too much for them. We'll only hunt her in the early morning or the late evening now." instance, was to fly into that territory, they might become the next preaf of the falcon."

Miss Piggy is one of three falcons at CFB Trenton. They also have a Praitie falcon that will control pigeons and other birds that size. The smallest of the trio at Trenton is a peregrine falcon but Peter warns, "Don't let its size fool you. That bird will take a duck if it gets the chance. They are also trying to get a Merlin falcon, which is slightly larger than a robin, but a very swift flyer to hunt the swallows and other small birds in the area.

Pressed flowers are easy and fun to make and give as gifts, say crafts specialists in the home economics branch of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food. Caring for roses

Healthy colorful roses brighten any garden, but they need a careful program of watering, spraying and trimming to look their best.

Water your roses generously once a week, when necessary. Be careful to wet only the soil and not the leaves because disease spreads rapidly when the foliage is damp, says Bob Fleming, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food horticulturist.

Keep roses free from diseases, aphids, leafhoppers, rose chafers aird other destructive pests by using a fungicide, such as benlate or captan, and an insecticide, such as Sewin, malathion or diazinon, every 10 days and following diazinon, every 10 days and following heavy rains. Spray plants and make sure all leaf surfaces, buds and wood are covered thoroughly. To prevent pests from developing a resistance to one chemical use several different insecticides alter-

To encourage an exhibition bloom on tea roses, remove all secondary buds as soon as possible so all of the plant's strength will go to the main bud, says Mr. Fleming. NOEL'S NOTES BY NOEL STOCKTON

Many years ago my sister Barbara caught a spy. It was, of course, during the war years, when she was removed temporarily from her proffesional activities as a successful and talented actress, and put to work for the British Government in their censorship department in London.

At the same time I am sorely tempted to presume that there must have been a affair, knowing my sister as well as I do.

That's not to say that she's any kind of a dummy, you understand, but she is inclined to be a shade vague at times, and somewhat on the verge of being scatterbrained, if you get my drift, and I have never been able fully to comprehend the circumstances that led her unveiling of this secret agent in her midst. To give you just the briefest account of the way it all came about, I should tell you that she was in the act of censoring a letter which was addressed to a private individual in Portugal, when she just happened to notice this reference to the writer's geraniums being in full bloom, and for some totally unaccountable reason, because you should know that her thumb is generally about as green as an over-ripe tomato, she was bludgeoned by the thought that geraniums were completely

After all it was Christmas.

So she put the letter on one side where it remained for a week or two before she eventually came around to wondering why she had laid it aside instead of dispatching she had laid it aside instead of dispatching it on its journey to Lisbon.

At the end of another day or two, when she had re-read the thing a score of times in an effort to shed a modicum of light upon the scene, it came back to her that geraniums were not expected to bloom in the garden while Santa was on his way, so she upped and took the epistle to her boss, who likewise gave some ponderance to it in

After they had both perused the thing again and again for some period, of time, the boss decided it should be subject to an investigation, and thus it was that ultimately the guy who had written it was arrested shortly afterwards by a couple of burly representatives of the Secret Police, while he was in the act of enjoying a breakfast of bacon and eggs, and at the same time they managed to confiscate quite an inventory of expensive spying equipment, whatever that is, and a couple of surprised, though questionable gentle-men who were busily acting as his aides and accomplices.

So you see they gave my sister Barbara an illuminated address and a medal,

On catching

accompanied by a brace of swift, sloppy kisses on both cheeks, delivered in person kisses on both cheeks, delivered in person by a stooping general with garlic on his breath, and a bonus to boot in the form of a day off for Christmas shopping. Now Barbara has always been in-ordinately proud of her participation in this little episode, and once a year, usually on Remembrance Day because that's the only time it seems to come to mind, she wears remembrance Day because that s the only time it seems to come to mind, she wears, her medal, displays her framed recommendation and instariably points to the spots on her cheeks where she received the moist lips of the hoary old general, neither of which, incidentally, left any lasting impact.

Impact.

The reason I set out to tell you about Barbara's spy, however, is quite a personal one, embodied in the fact that it reminded me of an encouter I myself had with a spy in France at the very outset of the last war.

As I didn't actually catch him there was no general to give me a peck on both cheeks that I would undoubtedly have deserved had my experience been a more fruitful one.

The way it happened, you see, was this.

The war had been in progress for a few quiet months from September 1939 and we, the British Expeditionary Force as we were affectionately known, were digging in and getting stuck in oodles of mud and slush, cursing and swearing volubly the while, waiting for the war to begin in

It was during the period of what they called the Phoney War, if you can believe that, although I never did think it was an adequate name for the affair, as people were hitting land mines and being shot by snipers, and life really was quite hazardous even then.

But this particular day we were camped But this particular day we were camped close to the City of Lille, through which there ran this sickly, infested canal which was yellow and smelly and full-to the brim with pollution of every kind. From soap powder to sewage, and the entire population of Lille did things into it every day of their lives, which did little to improve its flavour, its effluvium or its fragerance.

It so happened that I was in the act of washing out a pair of partly used underpants in this same canal when a underpants in this same canal when a couple of extremely excited citizens erupted from the gloom, waving their arms in ecstatic manner, registering a wealth of extreme peril and alarm and expecting me to enquire politely as to the cause of their profound emotions.

At the same time both of them were jibbering away with an amazing rapidity, all the while repeating their movements like that of a bird fluttering to earth in the last stages of its death throes.

After an interminable period of time, during which I scratched at the interior of my cranium for some sort of solution to be conveyed to me, it became suddenly impressed upon my consciousness that they were trying to inform me that a parachutist had recently descended from the skies, and was at that very moment hiding his person in an adjacent farmer's field, just a little way down the road.

Now my experience of German para-chutists up to this moment had been of a highly restricted nature, but I sprang forthwith into some sort of action with a fortitude and a suavity that would have put

First of all I tapped my revolver to make sure I hadn't forgotten to pin it on me, then very meaningfully I reached into my pockets to see if I had any bullets. I found a couple that must have been left there by mistake, and I carefully placed them in the holes provided for them

Then striding like Marshal Dillon ahead of the gesticulating guys, I marched down the road to the spot where the parachutist was supposed to be hiding.

Now in the centre of this field was a small wooden hut with a door at the front and a broken window at the side.

Around the field was a fairly high hedge in any part of which my spy could be effectively concealed, but for some utterly inexplicable reason I apparently con-sidered it more likely that he would be comfortably esconced within the wooden

So striding manfully into the fray I started to walk stoically across the field, hand on gun in the approved fashion, and I approached the building from the front, in full view of anybody who might be gazing thoughtfully through the broken window.

What didn't seem to have occurred to me was the distinct possibility that the guy would be armed, as most spies are I understand, but I have to admit that I wasn't used to this kind of foolishness, and I had, up to this time, lived an extremely bosom of my immediate family.

As the war progressed I became gradually more versed in the niceties and stableties of mowing people down, but at this early stage I was something of an amateur in the matter, with a minimum of finesse and absolutely no aptitude at all.

nnesse and apsolutely no aptitude at all. So here I am, right slap in the middle of this large, open field, foolishly I might say, advancing upon a wooden hut that presumably contained a desperate, angry enemy, who had ostensibly dropped from See-More Crafts and Supplies Daily 1 p.m. - 5 p.m. R. Thinking back to the days of my initial training I feel sure that somebody at some time must have exhorted me not to do that. but if so I had obviously overlooked the advice as I walked, like the gallant six hundred, right into the Valley of Death.

Well, it didn't quite happen that way, and fortunately for my future welfare, and that of my present family, the parachutist wasn't actually in that hut, or somebody else may at this moment be typing this

But he was certainly adjacent, because when I approached the building I distinctly heard these three shots, fired from the edge of the field, that thudded in quick succession into the side of that chalet, no more than three feet away from where my brains should have been.

Which was just a little too close. Naturally I ducked behind the wooden hut in jig time, where I lay panting, as one does when one is not of the bravest and one has the manure scared out of him, and I spent a little time in the contemplation of my predicament.

When my tangled nerves had resumed something of their initial sang froid, as they say in France, I struggled to my feet and looked around me, courageous to the

As, a matter of tact I never neard anything more about that spy, so I didn't get an illuminated address like Barbara did, nor a medal, nor a half day's holiday for shopping, which was all eminently regretable.

FARM SAFETY WEEK

The week from July 25 to 31st is Farm Safety Week and the Canada Safety Council has focused the 1980 campaign on tractor safety. This concern is due to the fact that tractors are involved in many farm accidental fatalities.

designing safety Manufacturers are features into tractor and farm equipment in general, but it is up to the operator to recognize unsafe conditions and the hazards involved in tractor operation.

The following tips will be useful in preventing tractor accidents:

Only the operator should ride on the tractor. Keep children away.

Reduce apeed before making a turn or applying brakes.

Stay clear of ditches, embankments, holes, etc....to avoid upset.

- Stay off hills and slopes too steep for safe operation. Set drawbar in lowest position when hitching to a heavy load.

Do not dismount when tractor is in

- Disengage power take-off (PTO) before

- Lower all equipment before leaving

Keep safety shielding in place when using the power take-off (PTO).

On public roads observe traffic regulations and identify equipment with the SMV emblem.

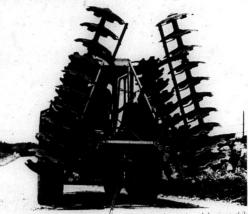

Traffic and farm equipment

Movement of farm equipment on public roadways in Ontario is a common practice. With farm units common practice. With farm units becoming larger, there is an increasing volume of farm equipment on the roads. Mixing slow, moving farm equipment with normal traffic can be hazardous if a few basic rules of the road are ignored. While tractor-drawn excells regardled equipment, do not or self-propelled equipment do not require license plates, most Ontario Highway Traffic Act regulations governing the operation of farm equipment are the same as those applying to normal motor vehicles.

Defensive driving is critical for any farm machinery operator. His actions can prevent a traffic mishap or cause one. The relative speed of normal traffic in comparison to farm equipment is the main problem. This speed difference can lead to rear end collisions, or passing under unsafe conditions. Most vehicle operators have experienced the frustration of being part of a mini traffic jam behind slow noving farm equipment. When traffic starts to build behind equipment, the operator should pull off to the side of the road and allow traffic to clear. If this is not possible traffic should be waved on when there is no oncoming traffic.

The Highway Traffic Act stipulates that farm equipment must have a slow that farm equipment must have a slow moving vehicle sign positioned at the rear. A red light at the rear of the tractor is mandatory if the tractor is operated on the roadway at night. Implements being towed by tractors at night must have green lights at the front and red lights at the rear if the tractor and implements are 20 feet or more in length). Observing these mini-mum standards is essential if rear end collisions are to be avoided. In addition to this, the use of flashing amberflights to this, the use of masting anticeronic for both night and day operation is a good idea. (Lighting requirements for over-dimensional farm equipment are outlined in the Highway Traffic Act. Regulation 196177.)

Safely executing a left hand turn on a Safely executing a left mark to more study high way can be hazardous, particularly if rear vision is obscured by trailing equipment. Often the only way to do this safely is with two people; one operating the equipment, and the other to direct traffic. When making a left hand turn with trailing equipment, operators should make certain that their equipment has enough time to clear the roadway in the face of on-coming traffic.

Avoiding roadway mishaps involving farm equipment requires a great deal of maturity on the part of the farm equipment operator. Following the rules of the road, defensive driving and courteous behaviour will make the roads safer for everyone. ■

Breathing easy

A variety of HSC cartridge respira-tors are available for protection against pesticides, welding fumes, paint spray, dust, mist, etc. The equipment does not protect the user from toxic gases. A pliable plastic face piece softens from skin warmth to ensure a tight, comfortable fit. Extra large filters and cartridges are said to permit easy breathing while maximizing filter and cartridge life. HSC respirators can be worn with safety goggles, spectacles, faceshields.

Safety plays a part in good livestock husbandry

Accidents that occur while working with livestock are responsible for a number of serious injuries and deaths every year.

Few of us look upon our farm animals as a source of danger. However, agricultural specialization has changed livestock handling methods in recent years. The large size of many herds makes safety awareness vital to efficient forms operation.

makes safety awareness vital to effi-cient farm operation.

Practical experience is the best teacher for handling any type of live-stock. Farmers who have worked with animals over a long period of time develop a feel for, or understanding of, animals and their characteristics. Development of an appreciation of these traits is crucial to safe and effec-tive livestock handling.

Following are a few points that merit particular attention on livestock farms.

1. Good housekeeping practices are essential in confinement systems, not only for your personal safety, but also for the health and well-being of your for the health and well-being of your stock.

2. Keep facilities in good repair. Chutes, stalls, fences and ramps should be maintained on a regular basis.

3. Respect all livestock. An animal may not purposefully hurt you, but its size and bulk may make it potentially dancerous.

ous. Special facilities and extreme caution are imperative to safe handling of male breeding stock.

Most animals are aggressive, when protecting their offspring. Be extra careful around newborn animals.
 Liquid manure holding areas should be secured against entry. Outdoor lagoons and ponds should be fenced.

10. In the interest of animal health, entry of strangers into a livestock oper-ation should be closely regulated.

The points outlined above only scratch the surface; farm operators, should look upon safe livestock handling as an integral part of good business management. It will pay dividends, in terms of both human well-being and improved livestock productivity.

Tractors involved in many farm fatalities

Many farm accidental fatalities involve tractors according to the Canada Safety Council. More than half of these "tragtor fatalities" result from overturn accidents.

Deaths can be avoided and injuries are minimized by installing rollover protective frames or crash resistant cabs on tractors, and by making sure, in addition, that operators wear safety belts. Should a rollover occur, the safety belt will keep the operator within the protected area.

To reduce the risk of tractor overturn, spread tractor wheels as far as possible. Be extra careful when operating on slopes, rough ground, near ditches and embank-ments or when pulling with a cable or chain. Reduce speed before making a turn. Attach equipment or chains to recom-mended points only.

CASE HISTORY: PTO entanglement

All seemed right with the world that/ bright July morning. Ed headed out to complete spraying operations on a sof field that was slated for installation of tile drains later in the month. A few scattered rain drops sizzled on the exhaust: Ed decided to stop for a few minutes and see if the weather would blow over. It would be senseless to allow the expensive herbicide to be washed off of the weeds.

"Might be a good time to check out the chattering in that PTO shaft," thought Ed. The small tractor and 3-point sprayer had performed admirably, but his boss planned to purchase new equipment for next season. The U-joints of the worn, unshielded PTO shaft were in had shape, and the angle frame was badly rusted.

Ed stepped down from the tractor to take a quick look at the shaft. The normally cautious young farmer didn't bother to disengage the PTO!

He noticed that a pin attaching one of the tractor lower link arms to the sprayer had started to work loose. Ed reached over to secure it; this is his last clear memory of that morning! The un-guarded shaft caught the sleeve of his shirt. In an instant, the young man's arm was all but torn from his shoulder.

No one (including Ed) was really able to understand how the young man freed ijmself and walked the 1-4-mile back to the house. His boss was almost overcome by nausea when he saw what had happened to the valued employee of whom he thought so highly. He fought off the initial shock and, with the help of another employee, drove Ed to the nearest hospital. to the nearest hospital

Fire extinguishers are classified according to the type of fire they are designed to extinguish. Generally, units are classed as A, B, C, or D, or a combination of two or more of these letters. Most common is the multi-purpose A-B-C dry chemical extinguisher. Readily available in 2½ and 5 pound sizes, this type employs ammonium phosphate as an extinguishing agent. Larger capacity A-B-C extinguishers can also be purchased. A-B-C units are ideally suited for farm use, since they can withstand temperature extremes and will effectively extinguish most types of fires likely to be encountered on a farm.

Fire extinguishers should be located near to (but not immediately within) hazardous areas. The pressure gauge on an extinguisher should be checked regularly. Make cer-tain that everyone knows how to use the equipment. Ex-tinguishers should be refilled promptly after use. According to FSA president,

Safety education must overcome habitual risk-taking

The sloping terrain of Fisher's Niagara Escarpment farm demands extra care on the part of machinery operators. This low profile tractor is specifically designed for increased hillside safety.

"Human beings don't mind taking a chance," says Peter Fisher, president of Ontario's Farm Safety Association (FSA). "Whether it's a matter of neglecting to fasten the car's seatbelt, or trying to unplug an operating corn-picker, we humans seem to believe that the risks we are taking will never result in an accident. We assume that such mishaps are reserved for 'the other guy"."

Safety education must take into Satety education must accept account this seemingly natural accept-ance of risk-taking, in Fisher's view. The FSA president is committed to promotion of safety in the agricultural workplace, and in society at large.

workplace, and in society at large. Accident, prevention is, of course, a management priority at his Burlington, Ontario fruit farm. Along with his FSA involvement, Fisher serves as a member-at-large on the Minister of Labour's Advisory Council on Occupational Health and Safety (see page 6). "I have always been reasonably conscious of the need for safety awareness on the farm," he explains. "But the extent of this need became even more apparent to me as the result of a poten-

The tractor started, lurched forward, and pushed the man through a shed wall. Fortunately, his injuries were minor. As Fisher points out, the incident did serve as a stark reminder of the need for greater awareness of hazards in the farm workplace.

The FSA president encourages safe working practices among the five to 15 employees he hires during the summer months. Size of the workforce varies with the stage of the growing season.

All staff are naturally covered under the Workmen's Compensation Act,

"The need for compensation always was a concern to me." Fisher says. "I elected to have coverage for my em-ployees as soon as agriculture was in-cluded under the Act, although particicluded under the Act, although partici-pation was voluntary for the first year." The Fisher family has farmed in the Burlington area since 1820. The present 200-acre operation is situated on the face of the Niagara Est priment, in one of the few places where that piece of natural sculpture, as Fisher must it "once superadually". puts it, "goes up gradually

He also runs a retail fruit and vegetable market on the farm.

Peter Fisher was appointed to the Farm Safety Association's Board of Directors by the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association, to act as a representative of the Province's fruit growers. He says that the extent of FSA activities in Ontario initially seemed amazing to him.

FSA activities in Ontario initially seemed amazing to him.

Fisher has now been actively involved with the FSA for several years. This experience has led him to believe that there is no easy solution to farm accident prevention. Instead, a combination of tactics will be needed to gradually improve agriculture's safety record. Following are the five key areas that Fisher and the FSA believe must be applied in combination to encourage safety on the farm.

1. Through educational programs, make the younger generation more aware of hazards and the importance of safety on the farm before they become safety on the farm before they become set in their ways. Habitual risk-taking seems to be a particularly acute problem among farmers.

2. It is important to make everyone involved with agricultural production aware of hazards, particularly those related to changing farming practices. For example, larger machinery is more efficient, but it also can inflict gruesome injuries because of its sheer power. Similarly, ensiling produces better livestock feed, but it also exposes farmers to lethal silo gas.

3. Some type of enforcement may be required to ensure that all farmers are making some effort toward establishing a safer workplace. With the gradual inclusion of agriculture under Provincial Occupational Health and Safety legislation the FSA is suggesting that initial regula-sately registation that initial regula-tions might cover a requirement for rollover-protection on tractors operated by employees; guarding and shielding of equipment; and use of personal protect-ive equipment in many working situa-tions.

4. There is need to-promote an atmosphere of awareness and concern in the rural community. For example, county farm safety associations are posting silo and manure gas warning signs on the appropriate structures. Numerous other localized efforts are aimed at the same objective of boosting safety awareness. Fisher is hopeful that the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food can expand promotion of county offices; he says the Minister of Agriculture and Food has indicated interest in this approach.

5. The Farm Safety Association

5. The Farm Safety Association 5. The Farm Safety Association must coordinate the total safety aware-ness promotional effort, including encouragement of feedback from farmers and their organizations. A multi-media approach is required; print, broadcast — even classroom in-struction — the FSA must make use of every opportunity to get its message.

"While many of the Association's programs are just in the development stage, our efforts are definitely having stage, our chords are demands an obstitute impact on safety awareness in the rural community." Fisher concludes.

Another close call with silage gas

Roy and Heather Thompson have spent many years developing a fine herd of purebred Holstein cattle. Pro-duction from an average of 40 milking cows plus export cattle sales represent the primary income sources for this Georgetown, Ontario-area family. Indeed, the Thompsons share much in common with many other progressive farm families. Unfortunately, part of that common experience includes facing the multitude of hazards that accompany modern production techniques.

The Thompsons' 17-year-old son. The Thompsons' 17-year-old son. Alian, came within seconds of death as a result of expessure to slage gas while performing a routine harvest time chore last autum. Keenly interested in farming. Alian would head for the barn shortly after returning home from school. Corn silage harvest was in full swing on the day of the accident. Heavy rains had left the fields in a sorry state. all of the men were in the field helping Roy Thompson free a stuck tractor when Allan arrived home that afternoon.

The young man headed for the barn to start work on the evening chores. His first task was to level out the four meagre loads of freshly chopped corn that had been blown into a 12 by 40-foot. silo before the harvesting machinery had become mired.

There wasn't much silage in the silo. There wasn't much silage in the silo, since no boards had been placed in the opening. Allan recalls. It was normal procedure for the Thompsons to hand level the first few loads of silage against the boards, then use the deflector at the top of the blower pipe to level the mass as filling.

"I'm not sure how long I worked in the silo," says Allan. "It couldn't have been more than five minutes, and probably was less I remember sensing that I was losing coordination and strength."

"I had difficulty getting out of the silo." Allan says, "but I finally managed to tumble out and landed in a silage cart. I stumbled into the barn, where fresh air from the open windows seemed to wake me up for a moment."

The Thompsons had no idea as to hat was affecting their son. They tushed him to the hospital: Allan was in terrible condition, but no one, including terrible condition, but no one, including the doctor, was able to diagnose the problem. Finally, the young man mumbled the word, "silo? His parents quickly concluded that silage gas was Allan's problem, because of his condi-tion.—After quick administration of oxygen. In the meantime, the doctor had checked some literature and confirmed that Allan did exhibit symptoms of exposure to silage gas.

"We looked up the information on signe gas later, and found that Allan's symptoms matched the written description exactly," emphasizes Roy Thompson. "Hospital emergency staff should recognize the symptoms of exposure to this gas."

Allan returned home after a few days in hospital. While lucky to be alive, the young man continues to experience health problems a year after the accident.

Heavy nitrogen fertilization, fol-lowed by a dry summer, wet autumn and an early frost, bosted the nitrate content of the Thompsons' corn crop-lext year. This would have made con-ditions right for production of high levels of silage gas during the ensiling process. However, the freshly chopped plant material had been blown into the silo just prior to Allan's exposure to the lethal amounts of silage gas would not be present until corn had been in the silo for several hours. Allan's close brush with death suggests the need for additional research into silage gas proadditional research into silage gas pro-

Allan Thompson is now enrolled in his first semester at the Ontario Agricultural College. His family hopes that his health will improve with the rest that a specially-designated 'quiet' section of the student residence should provide.

success rate for replanting limbs adily increased in recent years, result of the development of microscopic equipment and miniature surgical instruments. Microsurgery involves the use of special microscopes over the area of surgery. This is necessary for suturing tiny blood vessels and reattaching small nerve fibres. The successful reattachment of limbs is usually followed by months of therapy, necessary to regain control of the limb. In the case of an accidental amputation, few people will take along the severed limb. Time is an important factor in the reattachment of limbs.

Severed body parts, regardless of condition, should accompany the patient to the hospital.

The proper care of a severed body part is extremely important and will increase the possibility of success. Amputations that involve muscle tissue, such as an arm or leg, should be in surgery as soon as possible (within three to six.hours). Severed hands or feet can be replanted 12 to 18 hours after amputation. Fingers and toes can be replanted as long as 24 hours after amputation.

Following are steps that should be followed in caring for amputated

- 1 Rinse the severed part in water.
- Wrap the severed part in a moist clean cloth or towel.
- 3. Place the wrapped part in a clean plastic bag (seal the bag).
- 4. Use ice to keep the part cool (do not allow it to freeze).
